Balkan Veto May Bring Strong U. S. Counter Act

Johnson, Marshall Confer on Crisis in U. N. Precipitated By Russian Stand

A strong United States move to counter Russia's veto of the proposed Balkan border watch may come in the United Nations Security Council today, it was reported both here and in New York last night.

A previous statement from an authoritative United States source had declared that a Soviet veto might be followed by stiffer charges and direct accusations against Albania, Yugoslavia and Bulgaria in an entirely new complaint.

Confers With Marshall

A Lake Success source told the Associated Press last night that there was a "good chance" U. S. Deputy Delegate Herschel V. Johnson would return from Washington today with a definite plan of action.

Johnson spent much of yesterday here conferring with Secretary of State George C. Marshall and State Department aides on possible courses of action.

The Russians exercised the big power veto for the eleventh time in the Security Council Tuesday to defeat a United States proposal that a permanent commission be sent to the Balkans to keep a peace watch.

A Russian proposal concerning the Balkans is scheduled to come before the Council this afternoon. Dr. Oscar Lange of Poland, current Council president, announced yesterday that the India-Australia move to bring up the Indonesian case would get first priority today, but it was understood that the delegates would agree on early consideration of the Indonesia issue, then take up the Balkan matter.

Increased Guerilla Activity Seen

The Russian veto was not unexpected, either in Washington or London. The British said they were prepared to consult with the Greek government on how best to meet the situation arising from the veto. The Greek cabinet was called into special session last night.

It was believed that the Russian veto might result in an upsurge in

Reds Vow to Blackball Ireland, 2 Other Nations

Lake Success, July 30 (AP).—Russia said today she would use the big power veto again to blackball United Nations membership applications from Ireland, Portugal and Trans-Jordan.

Soviet Deputy Delegate Alexei N. Krasilnikov told the Security Council's membership committee that none of the three had diplomatic relations with Moscow and therefore could not qualify.

Krasilnikov then moved to block consideration of applications from Austria, Italy, Romania and Hungary on the grounds that the peace treaties had not been ratified. This step drew an immediate objection from the United States, which insisted on full discussion leading to a subsequent vote.

All the major powers except Russia have ratified the treaties with Italy, Hungary and Romania. The Austrian treaty has not been written yet because of differences in the Big Four on German assets in Australia.

China Accuses Soviet

The actual veto on U. N. applications would come in the Council next month when the committee submits the report on all applicants.

The other countries being considered are Albania and Outer Mongolia, opposed last year by a majority of the committee, and Yemen, which apparently will be admitted.

China spoke against the Outer Mongolian request today and accused Russia of sponsoring "a second front" against the Chinese

Broadcast Nazi Propaganda

Chandler Gets Life Term, Fined $10,000 for Treason

Boston, July 30. — Douglas Chandler, 58-year-old former Baltimore newspaperman, was sentenced to life imprisonment and fined $10,000 today, a month after he was convicted for treason for broadcasting the Nazi propaganda line over the official German radio during the war.

Rejecting the government's recommendation of the death penalty, Judge Francis J. W. Ford said he was satisfied that a life sentence would serve as "a deterrent to others who might be inclined to comm't a crime of a similar nature."

Chandler spoke briefly in his own behalf just before sentence was pronounced and declared he was not asking for clemency. Belligerently, almost brazenly, he stated he was convicted "not for what I had done but for what I believed in." And then he paraphrased the words of Patrick Henry:

"If it be treason," the "Paul Revere" of the German radio said, "to say what you believe it is right to say then—in the words of Patrick Henry—make the most of it."

"I do not ask for clemency," he said. "If I must die because I dared to speak the truth as I see it, then let me die. If I die for my beliefs they will not die with me, and there may be a rebirth of freedom."

Chandler said he was not insane and only allowed his counsel to use that as a defense during trial because they insisted. He said he had wanted to take the stand in his own defense, but was kept from it by his court-assigned counsel.

He said he would appeal to "the highest court."

Oscar Ewing, the United States prosecutor, demanded the death penalty "as a warning to potential traitors."

"Any lesser penalty," he said,

Longer Hours May Be Asked From British

Cutback in Standard Of Living and Army Reported Planned

London, July 30 (AP).—Informed Socialist sources said Prime Minister Attlee told Labor legislators today Britain will slash her armed forces in Germany, completely withdraw troops from Italy and Greece, scale down her standard of living and call for longer working hours in key industries in a "do or die" bid to save the nation's faltering economy.

The disclosures, envisaging a "belt tightening" in a nation already plagued by shortages, came in a closed "crisis" meeting of Labor members of Parliament in which Attlee squelched his critics and won what amounted to a vote of confidence for his government.

Market Declines

Acting in a crisis atmosphere, the Prime Minister prepared to broadcast to the nation on August 10 at 9 p. m., local time. A crowd of hundreds gathered outside his office at No. 10 Downing Street and prices tumbled again in a wave of selling in the stock exchange. Newspapers warned that the situation, compounded of low production and fast expenditure of Britain's U. S. dollar loan expected to run out about Christmas, would cause suffering throughout the nation. (The U. S. Treasury said Britain had about one billion dollars of her $3,750,000,000 loan left.)

A communique said Attlee had outlined "the broad lines" of his plans and that all Labor MP's present had expressed "complete satisfaction" with his statement.

Attlee left the legislators for an immediate meeting with mine union leaders where he asked the miners to work an extra hour each day of their five-day week at time and a half pay in order to boost the coal supply.

Plan Ups Prestige

An informed source said Attlee had declared British occupation forces of 200,000 to 300,000 men in Germany would be reduced quickly and considerably, and that British troops will be withdrawn from

U. N. Gives Urgency Status To Java War

Australia and India Join in Placing Issue Before Council

Lake Success, July 30 (AP).—Dr. Oscar Lange of Poland, president of the United Nations Security Council, tonight ordered an immediate hearing on the Indonesian question which was laid before the Council this afternoon by Australia and India.

Lange put the case on the Council's provisional agenda for tomorrow afternoon's meeting, previously scheduled on the Balkan question. The Council itself will decide which issue gets priority.

U. N. officials said they were prepared to schedule the Council's first night session tomorrow night to take up either of the issues.

Case Given Urgency Status

The Australian and Indian delegations, acting almost simultaneously, told the Council the strife between Dutch and Indonesian forces threatened world peace.

Lange declared the case would be treated "as a matter of urgency" which would permit action without the normal three-day delay.

Australia recommended that the Council as a provisional measure, call on The Netherlands and Indonesian government "to cease hostilities forthwith and commence arbitration."

It was disclosed in Canberra that Australia had acted after consultations with the United States, Britain and India.

In The Hague, a Netherlands spokesman expressed regret the question was before the U.N. He said he was amazed that the Australian action was taken under chapter VII of the U.N. Charter which refers to "aggressive actions from one state against another." The Indians brought their complaint under chapter VI on the peaceful settlement of disputes.

The Australian brief is the first to be filed under Chapter VII which provides for enforcement measures ranging from economic

Housewives Alarmed by Meat Prices

Lamb Chops Jump 40 Cents in Year, Steak 20 Cents, But Drop Is Due Soon

By Charles E. Davis, Jr.
Post Reporter

The price of meat yesterday had become something for the housewife to view with consternation.

It was moving upward in a slow, expensive spiral and choice cuts were retailing as high as $1.20 a pound.

The prices were far above OPA ceilings which prevailed last fall and not far from the dizzy heights reached a year ago when price controls on meat were temporarily removed.

A survey of chain and independent stores by The Washington Post showed housewives were paying dearly for loin lamb chops. One chain store was selling them for 89 cents a pound, but the best grade was bringing $1.20 a pound in one retail outlet.

40 Cents Rise Since Fall

Last fall the ceiling price on the best grade of lion lamb chops was pegged at 80 cents a pound.

An Agriculture Department official said consumer demand coupled with a season of relatively low meat production has brought about the price raise. He said the situation should be eased next month by increased supplies when grass-fed cattle start moving to market.

A House Agriculture subcommittee agreed with this prediction, declaring meat will be cheaper and more plentiful in the fall "unless the policy of shipping large quantities abroad is continued."

Locally, T-bone steaks were selling from 85 to 89 cents in the chain stores and from 89 cents to $1.10 in independent stores. This compares with a ceiling of 65 cents in effect last fall.

Sirloin Steak Soars

Rib lamb chops were bringing 80 cents a pound in the chain stores and from 80 to $1 in independent stores. The ceiling price last fall was 64 cents.

Sirloin steak was priced from 83 to 85 cents a pound in the chain stores and from 89 cents to $1.10 in the independents, which compares with a ceiling top of 65 cents last fall.

The best round steak cost only 60 cents last fall. Yesterday it was selling from 79 to 89 cents.

Grade-A bacon retailed at 47 cents a pound under price controls. Yesterday it was bringing 65 to 79 cents in the chains and 69 to 79 cents in the independents.

Chipped beef, which sold at a ceiling of 80 cents a pound last fall, now costs from $1 to $1.40 a pound.

Ice Cream Strike Ends With 11% Wage Increase

The strike of AFL drivers and inside workers in seven Washington ice cream plants was ended yesterday with acceptance of an 11 per cent wage increase.

About 380 members of Local 118, Bakery and Confectionery Workers, and Local 111, International Brotherhood of Teamsters, were to return to work today after eight days off the job.

The new wage scale is retroactive to June 1, date of the old contract's expiration, for the drivers only. Their wage jumped from $10 a day to $11.10. Among other increases: skilled workers, to $1.24 hourly; hardening room workers, $1.10; unskilled, $.94, brick wrappers, $.77 and popsicle workers, $.72. Also in the new contract is a provision for accumulated vacation time.

Negotiators for the unions were Robert L. Lester and Charles B. McCloskey, and for the employers, Ford Young, of the ice cream section, Merchants and Manufacturers Association.

Guiding the negotiators through much of the contract discussion were two Labor Department conciliators, James Holden and James J. OByrne.

Not-a-Candidate Vandenberg Goes Into Hiding for a Week

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan, the only GOP "not a candidate" candidate behaving like he means it, quietly slipped out of Washington yesterday to go into hiding for a week.

Friends said he not only isn't flirting with the nomination, but will remove himself as far as possible from the hustings until Congress reconvenes next January. He will be out of the country much of the fall, attending to United Nations knitting.

Vandenberg who left a "draft" loophole in his original not-a-candidate statement, may even renounce his present "favorite son" status if restless Michigan supporters push him too far for a hat-in-the-ring commitment.

In contrast to Thomas E. Dewey's thinly veiled political "vacation," and Senator Robert A. Taft's projected cross country tour, all the evidence indicates Vandenberg hasn't lifted a finger for delegates.

He has not only discouraged organization activity by [illegible] declined every invitation to s[illegible] when Congress adjourned Saturday he was on the best terms this session with Senator Taft. Nor had he impaired friendly relations with the Dewey camp.

To tongue-in-cheek comment that this leaves him in an excellent position to collect on a Dewey-Taft convention deadlock, Vandenberg fans merely shrug. Some mention other possible beneficiaries of a Dewey-Taft clinch, notably Dwight D. Eisenhower or Harold E. Stassen.

The Eisenhower talk, mostly emanating from Kansas, has been revived recently in connection with the tightening race. The Stassen strategy has sharpened as well, with the Minnesotan's blunt renunciation of any running tie with Dewey.

Vandenberg's strategy, if he has any, is simply to remain aloof from any politicking until Republicans convene in Philadelphia next June. He won't even go there as a delegate, but friends allow he'll be around.

As for his disappearance from

Hughes Charges 'Blackmail' Behind Air Contract Inquiry; Jones Tells White House Role

Former RFC Head Tells of Roosevelt Backing for Plane; Memo Introduced

By Marv Spargo
Post Reporter

The files of the late President Roosevelt yesterday furnished evidence that Jesse Jones, former Reconstruction Finance Corp. head, had been active at the White House for at least two years on behalf of Howard Hughes, multimillionaire airplane designer.

The former Cabinet officer told the Senate War Investigating Committee that President Roosevelt opposed the cancellation ordered by War Production Board Chief Donald Nelson of an 18-million-dollar flying boat contract with Hughes.

Jones said he discussed the matter with President Roosevelt after a Cabinet meeting.

He informed Nelson of the President's statement, he testified, and the contract was continued.

Jones termed Hughes "an aviation genius" yesterday and said he knew Hughes' father before him. Hughes came from Texas.

Under the questioning of Subcommittee Chairman Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.), Jones testified also that Noah Dietrick, vice president of the Hughes Tool Co., is also a very close friend.

"Is he a director . . .?" Ferguson started to ask.

"Yes he's a member of the board of directors of the bank in which I am interested," the six-foot Houston publisher snapped.

Documents Refresh Memory

The 63-year-old former cabinet officer at first had a difficult time remembering anything about any possible conversations at the White House in regard to Hughes.

The documents brought under subpena from President Roosevelt's files at Hyde Park were of some assistance in refreshing Jones' memory.

He identified one memorandum, dated February 18, 1944, of his conversation with President Roosevelt in regard to the flying boat contract.

"MEMORANDUM:

"I spoke to the President after Cabinet today about the big Kaiser-Hughes plane, and told him that we had been instructed by Mr. Donald Nelson to cancel the contract.

"I explained that the estimate that Mr. Kaiser furnished us at the time the construction of these big planes was being considered was that three of the planes, including the prototype, would cost 18 million dollars, and that approximately 13 million dollars had already been expended on the building, equipment and prototype; that it was now estimated that to complete the prototype alone would cost probably five million or six million dollars; that Mr. Nelson had ordered the contract canceled due to the extra time it would require to complete it, and upon the advice of experts in the aviation field.

"The President stated that he thought the experience to be gained by completing one plane would be of too much value to throw away the money already expended, and that the contract should not be canceled.

"JESSE H. JONES.

" 'Mr. Nelson later authorized us to complete the Prototype and DPC. Proceeded as per Letter of Intent dated March 27, 1944.'*

(*Written in pencil.)"

Jones said that "so far as he knew" President Roosevelt had nothing to do with the awarding of the original flying boat contract to Kaiser-Hughes Corp.

He flatly contradicted testimony given the day before by Henry Kaiser, West Coast industrialist, that it was the RFC chief who insisted the contract be handled

Declares Motive Was to Force TWA Into Merger With Pan American Line

By Alexander Kahn

Los Angeles, July 30 (U.P.).—Howard Hughes charged today that a Senate investigation of his airplane-building activities was a blackmail weapon to force the merger of his Trans World Airline with Juan Trippe's Pan American Airways.

Hughes accused Senator Owen D. Brewster (R., Me.) of offering to call off the investigation if he would agree to the merger on terms which he deemed unfavorable to TWA stockholders.

The alleged offer, Hughes said, was made by Senator Brewster at a private luncheon in February at the Mayflower Hotel in Washington.

The Texas-born Hughes accused Trippe of being behind the Senate investigation and of having ordered Brewster to delay start of the probe into Hughes' war contracts because he thought there was a chance the merger might go through.

The bluntly made charges brought a quick reply from both Senator Brewster and Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.), chairman of the subcommittee handling the Hughes investigation.

"I know the committee has never thought of calling the investigation off," Ferguson said in Washington. "I've been in this all along and there has been no intimation or request or suggestion that it ever be called off. The committee does not function that way."

Bible Further Cited

Senator Brewster declined comment until he had seen the full text of the aircraft builder's statement. When he had seen the text, he referred Washington reporters to the sixth chapter of the Biblical book of Nehemiah. The passage tells of a plot by three enemies of Nehemiah to discredit him among his people. Nehemiah's enemies asked him to talk to them in the desert. But Nehemiah refused, saying, "I am doing a great work, so that I cannot come down. Why should the work cease, whilst I leave it, and come down to you?"

Making an allegorical reference to the "open letters" Hughes had been issuing here, Brewster called attention to the passage in which Nehemiah's enemy, Sandallat, sent him aservant with "an open letter in his hand."

Enemies of Nehemiah also sent a spy to persuade him to hide but the Biblical character discovered the plot and said that to hide would be a sign of fear and would lead to "an evil report."

Senator Brewster commented that Hughes' publicity agent, Carl Byoir, "seems to have rather an inventive mind." Brewster indicated he was biding his time until Hughes appears before the committee.

Hughes asked Brewster to answer four questions:

"1. Did you or did you not offer to call off this entire investigation if I would agree to merge TWA with Pan American and support your community airline bill?

"2. Did I or did I not reply that I had already promised Juan Trippe that I would give him my answer in 30 days?

Merger Proposal Dropped

"3. And did Juan Trippe subsequently make a flight across the country to see me and spend two days closeted in secret conference with me at Palm Springs, Calif., or did he not?

"4. And when you returned from Europe thereafter, did Juan Trippe tell you to hold up and not push this investigation for a while, as

1100 Employes To Lose Jobs With Maritime

500 Here Included; Action Attributed To Slash in Funds

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

The Maritime Commission today (Thursday) will lay off more than 1100 of its employes. About 500 will be in this city.

To be fired are career employes who have 20 and 30 years of Government service. A big block of veterans also will be dismissed.

Unless plans are changed today, the employes to be fired won't be given any on-the-job notice. The dismissal notices are written to become effective tomorrow morning, August 1.

"We're up against the gun," a Maritime official said last night, "and we have no other alternative but to fire these people immediately, because we have not the money to pay them."

Order Given 'Reluctantly'

The official said the full commission had met until after 6 p. m. yesterday trying to figure some other way out. The firing order, he said, was approved with the "greatest reluctance." The official said the employes should have been given a better break and more consideration.

The layoff will hit mainly the War Shipping staff. About 1000 of its 1600 employes are to be fired. Also, a restudy of the Maritime proper budget indicates the agency is overspending for salaries. To balance its books, more than 100 additional Maritime employes must be laid off.

In Maritime proper, more than 1000 employes have already been laid off so far this month. About half of them are in this city.

Funds Request Cut

The agency requested an appropriation of $6,750,000 to pay salaries of its 1600 people on war shipping work. Congress cut the amount to $4,250,000 and the President signed the bill yesterday.

Budget cuts in Maritime proper either have or will wipe out 1100 jobs.

A Maritime official said the agency would be unable to carry on many of its functions—functions, which he said, would return to the Treasury many millions of dollars in the operation and sale of ships.

Investigators Seek Cause of Virginia Blast

Three Probes Begun Into Tragedy That Took 10 Women's Lives

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Harrisonburg, Va., July 30.—State and local officials today undertook three investigations into the Shenandoah Valley's worst tragedy, an explosion that demolished a business building here, killed 10 women and injured more than a score other persons.

Mayor Bernard T. Denton held a long conference with ranking city officials and later announced that the municipal government not only wanted to determine what caused the disaster, but also how to prevent "similar catastrophes" in the future.

The State Fire Marshal at Richmond and the Insurance Underwriters Association have also dispatched representatives to the scene to make independent investigations.

Damage More Than $60,000

The blast, followed by a small fire, destroyed a one-story brick building, containing four stores on the edge of the downtown business district.

Pauline's Beauty Parlor and School and the adjacent Rhodes Jewelery Store were demolished; the other two stores, one vacant and the other occupied by Advance Auto Parts, were partially wrecked.

Officials here estimated damage as upwards of $60,000. Mrs. Ruth Rhodes, head of the jewelry company, said there was some $30,000 worth of goods in her store.

"Considerable amounts of jewelry were blown into the street," he said. She told police she had been informed by spectators that there had been some looting of the valuables blown out of the store.

Gas Blamed

Origin of the explosion is still to be determined officially, but fire officials here felt that butane illuminating and heating gas had somehow filled the basement and had been ignited by an open flame.

That flame may have come from the match lit by Jesse James Mullin, a coal truck driver, who was in the basement shoveling coal at the 'Chances Are Tightening'

Strategy to Nominate Lincoln Shown in Letters Now Public

By Carl Sandburg
(Last of a Series)

Parts of the strategy by which Abraham Lincoln was nominated for President in 1860, and the wear and tear on the nerves of all concerned, are highlighted in a series of letters and telegrams now made known in a volume of the heritage gift of President Lincoln's son in the Library of Congress.

"Your chances are tightening," wrote William Butler of Springfield, from the Chicago scene two days before the convention was to open, and, "prospects look bright for you. All speak of you as their second choice."

"We are laboring to make you the second choice of all the delegations," wrote N. M. Knapp. "We are dealing tenderly with delegates, taking them in detail and making no fuss . . . brace your nerves for any result."

"Great confusion," but things "look favorable," Jesse K. Dubois wrote on May 13, and in a telegram the next day joining his name to that of David Davis of Bloomington, Ill., known as the most active and influential of Lincoln's campaign managers, a Circuit Court judge of long tenure and an owner of many farms. They wired Lincoln in Springfield: "We are quiet but moving heaven and earth. Nothing will beat us but old fogy politicians. The hearts of the delegates are (sic) with us."

Two days later Dubois, a Springfield neighbor of Lincoln, telegraphed Lincoln: "Prospects fair; friends at work night and day; tell my wife I am well." In the same sheaf of telegrams Lincoln read from David Davis: "Am very hopeful; don't be excited; nearly dead with fatigue; telegraph or write here very little."

"Your friends are at work," began a letter of Charles H. Ray, an editor of the Chicago Press and Tribune, ending, "Don't get excited." William Butler on May 16 at 4 p. m. wrote Lincoln a letter ending, "I am weighting (sic) in the Room where all is fuss and confusion."

On May 18 Representative George Ashumun of Maine, chair-

only by Hughes and that Kaiser let Hughes run the whole show.

"I couldn't have said that," Jones declared.

He said he signed the contract with Kaiser-Hughes on the direct orders of WPB chief Nelson. Jones explained that WPB was the top one of some 9 or 10 agencies which President Roosevelt had given authority to direct RFC to make contracts or loans.

"I never heard from Hughes until the order came from Nelson to cancel the contract," Jones testified.

Never Heard of Opposition

Ferguson asked, "Were you aware the Army and Navy were opposed to this project?"

"Never heard of it," Jones retorted.

Subsequent evidence was put into the record that Jones had sent a memorandum to Nelson, apparently the same memorandum he read on the stand, pointing out that President Roosevelt opposed canceling the contract.

Hughes came to him a number of times, Jones told the committee, about the proposed cancellation of the flying boat program.

"The effect of it was," Jones said, "that he didn't think the contract should be canceled."

Roosevelt "Was Interested"

Ferguson asked why he had mentioned the proposed cancellation to President Roosevelt.

"I knew the President was interested in the plane. It had been discussed with the President," Jones responded.

Jingling a handful of coins, Jones told the committee it certainly was not he who was interested in having the contract reinstated.

"I did my best to have Hughes quit for his own sake and do something else," he declared.

Jones indicated he did not know how the President learned about the flying boat contract.

"I wonder how the President had the facts on which he could base an opinion if you did not tell him," Ferguson pressed.

Memo Brought Results

Jones admitted that Nelson gave the go-ahead signal again on the contract after he notified him of the President's position.

"Then the contract was reinstated on your say-so?" Ferguson asked.

"No, on the President's," Jones replied.

One reply was dated July 8, 1942, and the second dated July 17 of the same year.

The first reply said the Army Air Forces had been in close touch with Howard Hughes and that Hughes had volunteered to build the plane at his own expense. The memorandum said that Hughes claimed his plane would go 430 miles an hour and "we do not challenge that sttaement." The memorandum added that the Army Air Forces and Hughes were negotiating to see if they could agree on a price.

In the second memorandum Arnold disclosed that the Air Forces and Hughes were agreed that if the plane passed necessary test, Hughes would be reimbursed for his costs and if the Government did not buy it, he would pocket the loss.

Doesn't Recall Birdwell

Jones did nto recall any conversations with the President about this matter, nor did he recall any with Hughes.

He said he did not talk to Elliott Roosevelt about it.

Jones testified he did not remember ever having met Russell Birdwell, publicity agent for Hughes.

H was shown a telegram signed by Birdwell, dated June 15, 1942, addressed to Stephen T. Early presidential press secretary, asking for 5 minutes of his time to explain a great development on the part of Howard Hughes, whom Birdwell said he represented.

Next came a letter, dated June 11, 1942, addressed to Marvin McIntyre, presidential assistant, and signed by Birdwell.

The letter said that Jesse Jones has discussed with President Roosevelt the work of Howard Hughes and suggested that the President might want to make an announcement to the press on this development, which Birdwell said would "revolutionize air fighting." (This was the F-11 photo-reconnaissance job.)

Birdwell wrote McIntyre that he wrote the letter hoping to find out if the President planned to make this statement.

McIntyre sent the letter to Early asking him if he knew about the statement referring to and "if not will you ask the Boss (President Roosevelt) about?"

Early replied in a memorandum to McIntyre:

"This is not a matter to take up with the Boss. It is a matter to take up with the Chief of the Air Branches."

The press secretary suggested that it was just a question of giving publicity to Howard Hughes and added,

"I happen to know Russell Birdwell. He is a high-powered Hollywood press agent."

Jones said he didn't think he had met Birdwell although he mat "nearly everyone" during the war years.

Ferguson: "Now this man Russell Birdwell says you discussed this with the President. How did Birdwell find out you discussed it with the President, if you didn't know him?"

Jones: "To begin with, I didn't discuss it with the President."

Ferguson asked him if his memorandum couldn't indicate he wanted the President to make an announcement to the press.

"I can't imagine that I did. I don't remember," Jones replied.

Martin on Stand

Glenn L. Martin, dean of American plane builders and the first witness at the third day of the hearing, said Kaiser told him in 1942 that he could "go to high places" and get an order for 500 Mars Flying Boats which would bring all involved a "nice profit."

Martin, the only U. S. plane maker who was building aircraft during the First World War, said he turned a deaf ear to Kaiser, explaining to him that he was operating under Army-Navy production orders. Martin said:

"I told him the profit motive was not of interest . . . He was surprised. I told him we were interested in making a reasonable amount of money.

Jones admitted that the aircraft activities of Hughes and Kaiser were the only aeronautical contracts in which he had interested himself during his stay in office.

Martin Says U. S. Had 30 Atom Bombers

The United States had at least 30 B-29 bombers fitted to carry atomic bombs when the war ended Glenn L. Martin said yesterday.

Martin, Baltimore aircraft manufacturer, made the statement during testimony to the Senate War Investigating Committee. At the hearing on aircraft contracts awarded to Henry J. Kaiser and Howard Hughes.

Senator O'Conor (R., Md.) asked whether the Martin company helped make the planes which carried the atomic bombs over Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Martin said the company constructed the planes at its Omaha (Nebr.) plant. They had to be fitted with special bomb-bay doors, he said, and added:

"I am sure I can say now that we had 30 ships ready to carry atomic bombs" at the war's end.

'Check Grabber' Returning

Paris, July 30 (INS).—Howard Hughes' publicity chief, Johnny Meyer, was located in Paris tonight on the eve of his departure for the United States and in denying the wartime parties he gave for Government bigwigs were "Roman orgies" asked, "What's wrong with a party and pretty girls?"

"Hughes and I are bachelors," he exclaimed. "Why shouldn't we invite girls to dinner?"

Meyer, who will be quizzed by the Senate committee investigating Hughes war contracts, said in an exclusive interview that he did not know the exact source of the funds with which he picked up the checks for "party girls" and night club blowouts across the United States.

But he added quickly:

"I hope to get a plane out of Paris tomorrow morning and go to Washington and answer all these 'Roman orgy' stories about my work and that of my employer, Hughes."

$500,000 Blaze Finally Controlled At Fond du Lac

Fond du Lac, Wis., July 30 (AP).—Weary firefighters, exhausted by a seven-hour battle in 90-degree heat today to save the business district of this Wisconsin city of about 30,000 from a holocaust, successfully confined the blaze to one major business block which was destroyed at a loss of at least $500,000.

The fire, which broke out at dawn, raged through the three-story brick shopping center of the Hill Brothers department store, gutting the structure and for a time threatening the whole downtown area. Also destroyed was the Ames dress store. Nearby stores were flooded by water from hoses. Three firemen were injured.

Attlee Proposes 'Do or Die' Plan for British Economy

Greece and Italy almost immediately.

Politicians and political writers said Attlee's personal prestige soared within the Labor Party when he outlined these plans:

1. A large volume of industrial production, hitherto channeled into the domestic market, will hereafter be sold exclusively in other countries.

2. Imports will be reduced drastically. American movies and tobacco will be especially affected.

3. To help in driving manpower from nonessential to essential industries, nearly all of which are undermanned, the government will "starve" the nonessential plants of raw materials and power.

4. Britain will slash her dollar expenditures in occupied Germany.

5. Workers in virtually all essential industries will be asked to work longer hours.

Longer work schedules presumably could not be put into force in other industries until miners begin working longer to provide more fuel.

Attlee conferred with the mine union leaders for three hours. Mine leaders previously had indicated they would cooperate.

Informed sources said Attlee will announce full details of his plans in the Commons next Wednesday.

Britain's forces in Greece total about 5000. Her strength in Italy has not been disclosed.

War Minister F. J. Bellenger told the Commons tonight "scare headlines" that Field Marshal Lord Montgomery, chief of the imperial general staff, had been ordered home from a Far Eastern tour to make drastic cuts in the army were not true.

chain outlets and from 70 to 85 cents a pound in independent stores yesterday, as compared to a onetime ceiling top of 48 cents.

Loin veal chops, which sold at a high of 48 cents a pound last fall, yesterday were bringing 73 to 79 cents in chain stores and 75 to 89 cents in the independents.

Rib veal chops, pegged at 43 cents a pound under price controls, were selling from 69 to 73 cents in chains and 75 to 89 in independents.

And for roasts, chain stores yesterday were collecting from 53 to 55 cents for chuck, from 55 to 79 cents for rump and 69 cents for rib. In the independent stores, chuck cost 49 to 55 cents, rump 69 to 89 cents and rib 65 to 75 cents.

Last fall the top prices were: chuck, 51 cents; rump, 60 cents, and rib, 48 cents.

No appreciable drop in meat prices before fall was seen yesterday by Raymond Briggs, chairman of the wholesale meat division of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, who said:

"Meat dealers don't want high prices, but prices will stay up so long as livestock sells at high prices."

The House Agriculture subcommittee headed by Representative August H. Andersen (R., Minn.) which reported yesterday that plenty of meat would be available this fall unless large shipments are sent abroad, also recommended halting all exports of corn and suggested shipments of wheat abroad be made "with caution."

(The Agriculture Department announced two weeks ago that no corn would be exported in July, August or September. Meat shipments abroad were almost entirely suspended early in July.)

The subcommittee reported that meat supplies in this country should increase by about 15 per cent during the fall and winter months if exports are halted.

The reports said that 445 million pounds of meat was exported dur- "Should the export program be ing the last 11 months and added: continued on the same scale, the prospect for lower meat prices may not be realized."

In urging that corn exports be halted, the subcommittee report said that "corn is the key product to the nation's meat supply" and that if this year's corn harvest is poor it will be necessary to substitute other grains, such as wheat, barley and oats, for livestock and poultry feed.

Because of this, the report recomhended "caution in the exports of wheat."

Three Girls Buck Circus Monopoly And Win—Tickets

Detroit, July 30 (AP).—Three small businesswomen bucked the world's largest circus Monday and emerged as winners of the economic struggle.

Pat Stewart, 11; her sister, Leona, 7, and Karen Thilson, 5, opened a lemonade stand on an orange crate strategically located in the middle of the entrance to Ringling Bros. & Barnum and Bailey.

Then the fledgling business firm began a price war with the big top by pegging their product at 4 cents a glass. The standard circus price is 10 cents.

Circus officials reached a compromise with their competitors just as police arrived to enforce a city ordinance against unlicensed sale of beverages.

Balkan Veto May Bring Strong U. S. Counter Move

guerilla activity in Greece as the Russian position was that the Greek government was to blame for the disunity in Greece.

Whether the United States could take immediate action in the Balkan case, depends on the Russians.

The Soviet has before the Council its own proposal for direct settlement of the dispute, withdrawal of all foreign troops and help from Greece, new Greek elections and formation of a coalition government. It is this proposal which is scheduled for debate today and which will give Soviet Delegate Andrei A. Gromyko the chance to explain his veto of the American proposal.

Washington sources said that in expectation of the veto, the State Department had done a lot of preliminary work on future action

Possible U. S. Courses

The United States might pursue the case in these ways:

1. The United States could charge Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Albania with a breach of the peace, a threat to the peace or an act of aggression. Under the U. N. charter the Security Council could institute sanctions or use military force, if necessary. This would invite another Russian veto.

2. The United States, under article 106 of the Charter, could call for consultation among the five major powers with a view to such joint action as might be necessary for the purpose of maintaining international peace and security. Unable to use the veto here, all Russia could do would be to turn down the invitation. The other powers, however, could meet and decide to set up a commission to stand inside the Greek borders and watch over the frontiers.

3. The United States could bring the Balkan problem before the U.N. General Assembly, where there is no veto. The Assembly could establish a border commission and recommend that Greece, Yugoslavia, Albania and Bulgaria cooperate with it. However, the Balkan countries could refuse and the Assembly could do nothing but reprimand them verbally.

Serious Crisis Admitted

Western delegates admit that a serious crisis is facing the world organization as a result of the Soviet veto.

That the United States considers the Balkan situation serious has been shown inofficial statements for the past several weeks. Tuesday night, right after the veto, Johnson declared that the Security Council was faced with a "very grave situation."

Previously Johnston had told the Council that Yugoslavia, Albania and Bulgaria (blamed in a U. N. report for fomenting the Greek border trouble) were a menace to international peace.

Johnston had demanded that the Council warn the three nations "to keep order in their owne houses and leave other peoples' affairs alone" lest war break out in the Balkans and affect the whole world.

Balkan Countries Again Warned

Last Friday, Johnston again warned the three Balkan satellites that any attempt to ignore decisions of the Security Council in the Balkan controversy might result in the strongest kind of enforcement measures.

Throughout the long debate, Britain has supported the United States position, going so far as to tell the Council that the issue is a "danger point."

Sir Alexander Cadogan, British delegate, told the Council it had better override narrow national interests and solve the Balkan crisis, or else "tear up the charter and pack up."

government through Outer Mongolia's invasion of Sinkiang.

Declaring that "all statements made by the Soviet delegate are Outer Mongolian lies," China's Dr. Shuhsi Hsu said tersely:

"The Soviet delegate would have demonstrated a better insight into the political situation in the Far East if he had come with the statement that Outer Mongolia invaded Sinkiang as a diversion for the rebels in northeast China (Manchuria) and as a second front against the Chinese government."

The committee will decide next Friday on the Soviet demand to table Austria and the former Axis countries.

The United States position, learned from a highly reliable source, was understood to be this:

The United States will plump for the immediate admission of Austria and Italy, contending that legal difficulties should not stand in the way. In turn the American delegation will "strongly question" the eligibility of Soviet satellites Hungary and Romania. In this discussion there are indications that the United States will initiate a blunt discussion of the type of government now prevailing in those two countries.

He said the merger of the airlines was not acceptable from the standpoint of TWA stockholders and was dropped by him.

Boy, 9, Is Found Dead by Diver in Alexandria Pool

Nine-year-old James Howard Watson, of 1314 Princess st., Alexandria, was drowned yesterday afternoon in the Alexandria Municipal swimming pool.

According to T. M. Fitzgibbon, manager of the pool, an unidentified swimmer dived into the deep end of the pool and touched the boy's body. Stewart Anderson, 18, one of six lifeguards, brought him to the surface immediately and life-saving measures were begun.

Eugene Barnwell, Alexandria recreation director, said it was a "matter of conjecture" as to how the boy drowned. James' body was found in ten feet of water. Witnesses said the boy had a large "strawberry" bruise on his forehead.

He was pronounced dead by Dr. John E. Roberts after more than an hour of artificial respiration had failed to revive him.

Strategy to Nominate Lincoln Shown in Letters Now Public

man of the convention, signed an elaborately elegant script notifying Lincoln of the action of the convention in nominating him for President. On the same day David Davis telegraphed Lincoln: "Write no letters and make no promises till you see me. Write me at Bloomington when to see you; I must see you soon."

Later in the day the anxious David Davis, weight 300 pounds, and it was swelting hot weather in Chicago, added vehemence to his earlier counsel with a second telegram to Lincoln: "Don't come here for God's sake; you will be telegraphed to by others to come; it is the united voice (?) of your friends not to come; this is important." A third telegram that day further advised Lincoln to stay right there in his home town. The three editors of the Chicago Press and Tribune, C. H. Ray, J. L. Scripps and J. Medill, wired the new nominee: "Our consultation the Penna folks say do not come here till after New York has gone home."

The most prolific of letter writers to Lincoln before and during the convention was Mark Delahay of Kansas, who seems to have been about the only person to whom Lincoln paid small amounts of cash for political work in rounding up delegates. When Lincoln later appointed Delahay to the Federal bench it was questioned by many as certainly the queerest, and possibly the worst appointment, ever made by the war President. Delahay's letters are the only ones I have met thus far in this period which use the name "Abe Lincoln" on the envelope address.

He wrote Lincoln from Leavenworth, Kan., Nov. 14, 1859, with the salutation "My dear friend" which is the only one of that familiarity I have thus far met, and wrote, in part: "Today, if you would only discard a little modesty and not distrust your own Powers, and Strike boldly and for the next 6 months cease to be a modist (sic) man you are more likely in my Judgement to fill the Bill that (sic) any man I can think of . . . I have the controll (sic) of two leading papers in Kansas, to wit, The Daily Register here . . . and the State Record at Topeka . . . and I have a claim against the Gazette Wyandott for $1800—and am part owner of the two first papers, if I can see the Effort made properly in Illinois they shall all whirl into line."

He had the name of a blowhard, this Delahay, who later was to resign from the Federal bench in apprehension of evidence to be brought—that he was a habitual drunkard and had heard cases in a state of intoxication. He wrote Lincoln during the convention of how he was swinging the nomination, and, "If we are beat this will be the last time I shall ever be heard from in politics." His brief and shaky scrawl, after Lincoln was nominated, closed, "It is the happiest day of my checkquered (sic) life."

At Springfield, December 28, 1860, Lincoln wrote a letter we now have in a copy in John Hay's handwriting. It embodied Lincoln's best idea, for that hour probably, looking toward reconciliation. Duff Green had come to Springfield, as an unauthorized ambassador from the seceded States, "endeavoring to draw a letter out of me," wrote Lincoln to Senator Lyman Trumbull at Washington. To Trumbull went a copy of the letter Lincoln would hand to Green if, as he wrote Trumbull, "on consulation, our friends, including yourself, think it can do no harm." On condition that 6 of the 12 United States Senators from the States of Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Florda and Texas should sign their names to a recommendation that their States "suspend all action for dismemberment of the Union, at least, until some act, deemed to be violative of our rights, shall be done by the incoming administration"—on that condition Lincoln would publicly declare for "the maintenance inviolate of the rights of the States" essential to the national fabric, Lincoln to specifically declare, "I denounce the lawless invasion, by armed force, of the soil of any State or Territory, no matter under what pretext, as the gravest of crimes." And of this groping for a solution came—nothing, no letter from Duff Green to publish.

A letter of Joseph Medill, editor of the Chicago Press and Tribune, viewing the national scene from Washington, D. C., was marked "Confidential," dated December 31, 1860, to "A. Lincoln Dr Sir" reading:

My apology for so frequently writing to you is that we are in a revolution, and I am a volunteer sentinel on the walls. It is a plan of the disunionists to have an army in this city within five weeks, to drive out the Republican members and to prevent your inauguration by force. It is expected that in 30 days Maryland will pronounce for the disunionists. Who can say that she will not?

Let me suggest an idea that has occurred to me: Would it not be a coup d'Etai were you to quietly, with only a carpet sack, get on the cars, and drop down in this city some day next week or very soon. Would it not knock over and disarrange all the plans of the traitors, and show them they had a second Jackson to deal with. Thousands of our friends would then flock here from all parts, and Maryland would remain loyal. You could either put up at a private house or at the hotel, as be deemed most advisable. Our friends would then have a head here with whom to advise, the fed. State Governments would promptly respond to any call made upon them in defense of the Union.

It is all important, that you take the oath of office here on the 4th of March on the steps of the Capitol. The moral effect will be with (worth) an army of 10,000 men. If this suggestion is worth anything turn it over in your mind. Perhaps you have already resolved to do so.

Secresy (sic) and dispatch, Napoleon the Great, said, were the talisman (sic) of success.

Yours in haste,
J. MEDILL.

The folks, the American people in their infinite variety, stand forth in the swarming scripts and scrawls of the 194 volumes. What did Lincoln mean when John Hay heard him tell a dream where a figure spoke, saying, "God must have loved the common people—he made so many of them"? He could have had in mind the likes of honest, industrious, scrawny, lovable Hannah Armstrong. Tradition has it she washed his shirt, "foxed" his breeches, cared for him as one of her own boys in early days of struggle, wept in a court of justice when he won acquittal of one of her sons on a charge of murder. Now we have her letter of July 23, 1858, at "State of Illinois Mason County" addressed to "Mr. A. Lincoln, Atts at Law, Sangamon Co. Ills.," and her one straightaway paragraph narrative of woe and need, reading:

dear Sir after my best respects to you I am now in destress and dont know what to do I live on 40 acres of land and have a tax Title deed for it sold for taxes for the year 1855 to Edward brebaum and assigned to John Armstrong My Husband in his life time and I have the sherifs deed for it And have paid Tax for it ever sence And I am now living on it and the water rises in my seller and milk house so that I cannot live in satisfaction And I have baught 40 acres joining the 40 I live on sence the death of my husband and have part of both forties in Cultivation now sir what I want To know is this if I move my house on to the 40 I baught senc the death of my husband wheather I can hold the forty that I now live on as homestead or not as they joine and part of both in cultivation and house and both fortys would not Be valued to one thousand-Dollars and I want you to write to me on the receip of these lines and let me know wheather I can move my house and hold the land or not

Direct to Petersburg, Illinois
Hannah Armstrong

And we are quite certain, from what we know of similar occasions, that Hannah in her "destress" got the best of legal counsel without fee and with affectionate regard.

Not far away, in the same year, one J. A. Berdan at Jacksonville, Ill., on August 8 wrote they must have Lincoln's help or they would lose their county in the next election. Berdan subscribes himself at the close of the letter, "With true and unalterable friendship." Those who know chaste Addisonian English and like it, those who go for the cult of the old fashioned gentleman, will meet a friend in Berdan's letter, reading:

We are not so unreasonable as to wish to intrude upon your wiser determinations or interfere with your better arrangements. We wish you to know however that we think we need you here and that if possible you must make an appointment to come. We are more concerned for your success, than we ever were before for a political triumph and must be excused for pressing upon your consideration what may seem to be a suggestion for our own benefit. It is nothing more nor less than a deep and sincere conviction, that we are in danger here, and are more likely to be saved through your own rather than through our own demonstrations.

time of the explosion. Injured and rescued from the debris, Mullin recalls striking a light for a smoke as his last conscious act before the blast.

Not alone Harrisonburg—"The Friendly City"—but all the Shenandoah Valley mourned today for the dead and injured. Residents of a dozen valley communities were training at the beauty school, working or patronizing the store, when the blast occurred at 2:10 p. m. Tuesday. There will be separate burials in various parts of the valley.

20 Patients in Hospital

Throngs of kinfolk and friends visited Lindsey's and Higgs' funeral homes, and Rockingham Memorial Hospital, which turned its dining hall into an emergency wardroom to take care of more than 20 patients rescued and rushed from the wrecked building.

Four of the injured were still in critical condition late last night. They are Mrs. Carl Ritchie, 38, Harrisonburg, manager and half owner of the beauty parlor; Miss Ruth Eleanor Hart, 32, of Front Royal, a student; Miss Olive Dove, 19, Harrisonburg, a beauty operator; and Mullin, the coal deliveryman, also of Harrisonburg.

MILDRED MOORE
Trapped two hours

Ten others were still hospitalized with less serious injuries.

The 'luckiest person to be alive"—to her way of thinking—Mrs. Pearl Judy, of Harrisonburg, an operator who was first to escape from the twisted wreckage, today gave the first inside-the-building eyewitness story of what happened.

Mrs. Judy, an operator, was working on a permanent for a customer in the second booth.

Walls "Seemed to Bulge"

"I was just ready to put on the steam," she said, "when I heard a dull, deep rumble. Everything seemed black . . . dizzy . . . dense . . . like it was all pitching forward . . . I threw my hands forwards . . . the walls seemed to bulge out and then back again . . . I said . . . 'Oh, God, is this going to be the last of me!' . . . then things came down on top of me . . . Things got black . . . then I saw a hazy light and crawled out . . . Somehow, I was never calmer in my life . . . and no pain at all . . . Saw building was flat . . . No screaming at all . . . Crawled out then started crawling back . . . to help . . . but someone grabbed me in a vise-like grip . . . and I knew it would take strong men and machinery to get them all out . . ."

Released from the hospital a couple of hours after she was taken there, Mrs. Judy stayed for several hours more identifying the dead and badly injured.

Lucky too, was Glenn Wade, 23, of Baxter Springs, Kans., here visiting his fiancee, Miss Mildred Moore, 19, who attends Madison College. The young couple was in Rhodes Jewelry Store shopping for things they will need when they get married next fall. He said:

"The clerk was in the back getting us some china, and I think we were looking at a pair of ice-cube tongs, when the place blew up. The wall or ceiling fell between us, and I couldn't find her."

Wade was blown out of the building and escaped with relatively minor injuries. Miss Moore was trapped for two hours in the wreckage before volunteer firemen cut her loose with the aid of acetylene torches and heavy construction equipment. During that period, despite her injuries, she joked with her rescuers.

The clerk, Mrs. Rebecca Sheron, of Harrisonburg, was killed by the blast.

A checkup yesterday disclosed there were other lucky or blessed persons in this community of 10,000. Mrs. Audry Pence, of Harrisonburg, a regular operator, took the day off yesterday because of a poison-oak-infected hand.

Ethel Stover, also of this city, a graduate nurse, had stepped out of the beauty school only a few minutes before the explosion. Jessie Havener, a student, had left on a brief visit with her folks in Churchville, Va.

There were 21 persons inside the beauty parlor at the time of the blast, including 9 students, 1 instructor, 6 patrons, and 5 operators. In the jewelry store there were 2 customers and 4 employes. The vacant store was occupied by two painters. There were five clerkes in the auto sales store. Also there were three coal deliverymen on the building premises.

Police Chief Ritchie posted a guard of special officers on 24-hour watch at the explosion scene, pending completion of the investigations. Crowds of curious wondered aloud as to how much jewelry was scattered in the debris.

2 Soldier Hostages Executed By Irgun, British Informed

Tel Aviv, Palestine, July 30 (AP).—A voice claiming to be that of a representative of Irgun Zvai Leumi declared over the telephone today that two British sergeants, held as hostages for three executed Jewish underground members, had been executed by hanging.

The telephone voice said Clifford Martin and Mervyn Paige were executed "because they were convicted of being enemies" and not in reprisal.

The anonymous caller said the "sergeants were hanged in the government forest a few miles south of Natanya before dawn."

But searchers went through the forest without finding a trace.

(A Jewish Agency spokesman in London, commenting on the reported executions, said "Our first reaction is that we hope this information is not true. If it is, we are horrified and condemn it outright."

(An official statement in London said 46 British soldiers and civilians and police have lost their lives in Palestine violence during the first half of 1947.)

Two more British soldiers were killed and three slightly injured by an electrically detonated mine near Hedera railway station today when a military truck was blown up.

France Refuses to Force Jewish Refugees Ashore

Paris, July 30 (AP).—The destination of 4500 wandering Jews who refused to disembark from the British convoy at Port de Bouc after an unsuccessful attempt to enter Palestine, remained a question for the British Government today.

Two of the transports which returned the refugees, passengers of the intercepted President Warfield, renamed Exodus of 1947, pulled out to sea and anchored five miles from the French Mediterranean coast, while the third remained in the harbor.

Authoritative informants declared Britain had been placed in "a very tough spot" by refusal of the French to force the Jews to get off the ships at Port de Bouc.

The U. N. Special Commission on Palestine, now sitting at Geneva, Switzerland, voted down a proposal of Guatemala to send a delegation to Port de Bouc to investigate. It decided, however, to send a committee to investigate Jewish displaced persons camps in Europe.

"will encourage the commission of similar crimes in the future."

Chandler's broadcasts, the prosecutor said, were designed to aid Germany by undermining the American war effort and by creating doubt, suspicion of fellow-Americans and loneliness in the hearts of American troops.

"His acts show the black wicked heart of a traitor," Ewing said. "This was planned, premeditated, calculated treason and it is the judgment of the Attorney General (Tom Clark) that the only penalty which will prevent the commission of similar offenses in the future is the death penalty."

Ewing charged that "Chandler expected to return to America after a German victory and be acclaimed by the masses. He probably expected to be the fuehrer over here."

Judge Ford, a classmate at Harvard of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt, who was maligned almost nightly by Chandler in his shortwave broadcasts from Berlin, said he was satisfied Chandler was not insane and was responsible for his acts.

Bricker Throws Full Weight Behind Taft, Saying He Doesn't Anticipate Own Candidacy

Columbus, Ohio, July 30 (INS).—Senator John W. Bricker, GOP vice-presidential nominee in 1944, made public today his "unqualified" indorsement of Senator Robert A. Taft for the Republican presidential nomination in '48.

Bricker's announcement came at an afternoon news conference as an advance opening for tomorrow's "Ohio Republican Recognition" rally called by State GOP leaders.

The former three-time Ohio Governor revealed that he urged Taft to be a candidate for the GOP presidential nod as early as last December.

Bricker "Never Candidate"

"I told Senator Taft," Bricker asserted, "that I did not anticipate nor had I anticipated at any time, being a candidate for the nomination.

"I told Senator Taft I felt he should be the candidate and urged him at least to be a candidate for the Ohio delegation."

Bricker said Senator Taft told him he did not have any plans and would not have any until after the congressional session just closed. Bricker said Taft since has changed his plans and will not make any announcement until after a trip to the West Coast this fall.

The "Taft-for-President" drive on the part of Ohio Republican leaders will get under way formally tomorrow noon when the Republican State central and executive committee indorses Taft as Ohio's "favorite son."

Taft Not Talking

Taft, at his office in Cincinnati, declared that he "positively will not discuss any phase" of his possible presidential candidacy while in Columbus.

The senior Ohio Senator, who was the State's favorite son candidate at the 1940 convention at which Wendell Willkie was nominated, will address the Nation on the congressional legislative record over a Nationwide radio network Thursday night. He will be speaking before the Ohio "recognition dinner" at which are expected some 1000 Ohio GOP leaders.

Bricker and Ohio Gov. Thomas J. Herbert also will speak at the session, called ostensibly to honor Ohio's Republican Congressmen, but actually for the purpose of launching the "Taft-for-President" campaign.

Ohio Republicans supported Bricker for the presidential nomination in 1944, but Bricker withdrew before the first ballot when it became apparent that Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York had the nomination sewed up.

Predicts Nomination

The Republican State organization assured Bricker that it "is anxious to present a united program for Bob in Ohio."

Bricker also pledged that he would go "all out" for Taft's candidacy and would do "anything in the campaign that I can." He also predicted Taft's nomination.

Asked if his statement removed him from the presidential picture, Bricker replied:

"It doesn't remove me, as I've never been in."

As to whether he would accept the GOP presidential nomination in event it were offered him after a possible deadlock at next summer's convention, Bricker asserted:

"No man who loves his country and believes in representative government and the principles of his party would reject the nomination. But I don't anticipate any such action."

Chevrolet Hikes Prices $75-$100 on 2 Models

Suit Withdrawn By Col. Kilian

Col. James A. Kilian yesterday withdrew his District Court suit against President Truman.

Colonel Kilian had charged that the President wrongfully deleted his name from a list of those to be promoted by the Army. In a formal statement, Colonel Kilian's attorneys defended his conduct as wartime commander of Lichfield Prison Camp. They said that Colonel Kilian's court martial found him guilty of permitting brutalities he was not actually aware of.

Dewey Rejects Taft Challenge

Flint, Mich., July 30 (AP).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey served notice indirectly tonight that he will not be forced into a public discussion of national or foreign affairs.

The New York governor, here to attend a dinner in his honor, sponsored by the non-partisan Flint City Club but with Michigan Republican leaders nivited, refused to comment on a call by Senator Robert A. Taft (Ohio) for a "frank discussion" by fellow Republicans of major issues affecting the Nation at home and abroad.

Taft, considered the chief current rival of Dewey for the 1948 GOP Presidential nomination, said in Washington:

"Before the Congress meets again in January, I think all these matters should be freely discussed throughout the country, particularly by Republicans."

Tells Views in Private

This was interpreted by political observers as a challenge to Dewey to speak out, but the Governor, informed of Taft's statement, elected to keep still.

Since the first of the year, Dewey has touched occasionally on foreign affairs, such as his indorsement last March of United States aid to Greece, and although he has remained publicly mum on political questions during his "vacation" tour, in private talks with Republican groups he has given his views on some national issues.

At Salt Lake City he told a delegation of Young Republicans, they reported, that he favored the Taft-Hartley labor law. In Owosso, where Dewey has been visiting his mother since Sunday, he told Michigan Republican leaders, they said, that he favored tax reduction.

Taft, whose candidacy was expected to be launched in a major way at a dinner for him in Columbus, Ohio, tomorrow night, told a Washington reporter Tuesday that he intended to bear down on national and international issues during his western trip in September. "I plan to talk about the issues before the country, including the Marshall Plan for economic aid for Europe," he said.

Numerous attempts have been made in the last few months to smoke out Dewey—for the record—on domestic and foreign questions, but the New York governor has squelched them all.

His apparent strategy is to hold his fire until he feels the time is ripe and the occasion suitable. He seldom has been bashful about giving his views, but he insists upon choosing his own spots for delivering them.

Silver Spring Veteran Wins Mich. Primary

It's a long way to Congress from Silver Spring, Md., for a legless veteran, but Charles E. Potter expects to make it easy via Michigan's Eleventh Congressional District.

Potter won in a walk yesterday from his opponents in the Republican primary to fill the House seat vacated by the death of Representative Fred Bradley (R., Mich.).

The 34-year-old former major, whose campaign slogan was "I lost my legs but not my head" will face another veteran Democrat Harold Beaton of St. Ignace in the August 13 special election.

Potter has lived at 1513 Falkland Lane, Silver Spring, for about a year, but he kept his voting address at his home in Cheboygan, Mich. He has been in this vicinity longer than a year—ever since he arrived at Walter Reed Hospital from the battlefield around Colmar, in Alsace.

He enlisted in 1942 and on that day on January 31, 1945, when he stepped on a mine he was a captain with the Twenty-eighth Infantry Division. He earned a Silver Star, the Croix de Guerre and a couple of Purple Hearts.

With his background as a social service worker, Potter became vocational rehabilitation representative for the eVterans Administration here.

That job was washed out recently—but Potter decided he liked it around Washington.

the Capitol yesterday, without any parting fanfare, he's going on vacation for a week and doesn't want to be disturbed. It's the first solid week's vacation he's taken since before the war.

For the rest of the summer and fall he will be busy with United Nations and related Chapultepec business. On August 12 he will leave Washington for the Inter-American conference in Rio de Janeiro. Although not a delegate to the U. N. General Assembly meeting in New York in September, he will be there. Later he is expected to join Secretary of State Marshall at the November Foreign Ministers Conference in London. That doesn't leave much time out for even an "inactive" campaign.

U. S. Major Missing

Frankfurt, Germany, July 30 (U.P.).—The Army criminal investigation division announced today that it was searching for an American major, Harry F. Jolly, who disappeared from a Frankfurt-Paris train five days ago.

Stassen Says Dewey Ducks Major Issues

Los Angeles, July 30 (AP).—Harold E. Stassen, former Minnesota Governor and avowed candidate for the 1948 Republican presidential nomination, said today he opposes Gov. Thomas E. Dewey as the party's standard bearer because the latter has taken no definite stand on issues likely to develop.

He said at a press conference that "I do not entirely agree with Senator Taft," also a possible nominee, adding, however, that the Ohioan has taken a stand on the primary issues.

The major campaign issues, Stassen said earlier, will be curbing of communism in the United States, and housing and veterans' legislation.

Stassen, who arrived here from Sacramento where he conferred with Gov. Earl Warren, said he thought he and the California chief executive would be "in accord" in 1948. He did not commit himself, however, as to whether he wanted to be on the same ticket with Warren.

Stassen said his attitude toward New York's Governor Dewey might change if the latter clarifies his attitude on national issues. He also predicted that rank and file labor will approve the Taft-Hartley bill, once the workers understand it.

He declared he has definitely decided to enter the Wisconsin primary election.

Vital Democratic Candidates Lost By Marcantonio

New York, July 30 (AP).—United States Representative Vito Marcantonio, of the American Labor Party, failed yesterday to elect a majority of the members of the Democratic County Committee in Manhattan's eighteenth Congressional district which he needs for that party's designation in the next election.

Two candidates he backed for Democratic assembly district leaderships in yesterday's primary were defeated.

Under a recent State law the Democratic County Committee must authorize th Democratic Congressional standard bearer in the district. Marcantonio had the Democratic designation in his last two previous campaigns but yesterday's results lessened his chances of winning it again through control of the committee members of the district.

Throughout the primary hours, augmented police patrolled the eighteenth district on orders of Police Commissioner Arthur Wallander, whose department was placed on the spot last November when Republican Campaign Worker Joseph Scottoriggio was fatally beaten by unidentified men while en route to the polls. The case is still unsolved. The primary was without incident.

British Bar Java Shipments

London, July 30 (U.P.).—Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin told the Commons today that Britain has prohibited the shipment of war materials to the Dutch East Indies from the United Kingdom, or any British territory in the Far East.

He refused, however, to accept a suggestion that Britain cease training Dutch troops.

"However, we are not doing this for the purpose of this war in Indonesia," he said.

Mercy Plane Mistaken For Bomber, Dutch Say

Batavia, Java, July 30 (A.P.).—The Netherlands army, referring to Indonesian charges that two Dutch fighters had shot down a mercy transport plane carrying medical supplies to the Republic, said today that the identity of the aircraft had not been clearly established.

It would be a cause of "great regret," the army declared, if it should develop the plane was on a mercy flight.

The Indonesians today gave a state military funeral in the Republican capital of Jogjakarta to the nine persons—three British, five Indonesians and one Indian—who were killed yesterday in the plane.

The Dutch said they attacked what they thought was a Betty or Helen (Japanese) type bomber which took evasive action, coming down to tree-top level. Dutch pilots said they fired warning bursts but did not hit the larger plane. The twin-engine aircraft struck the trees and crashed, they said.

The Republican radio said the Indian-owned plane, a Dakota, had taken off from Singapore with two tons of medicine. As it approached the landing strip at Jogjakarta the Dutch fighter plans attacked with machineguns and the transport crashed in flames.

Dutch Reject Action by U. N. On Indonesia

By The Associated Press

The Netherlands' ambassador, Dr. Eelco van Kleffens, said yesterday that the Indonesian issue was outside the jurisdiction of the United Nations.

Dr. van Kleffens, former Foreign Minister and his government's United Nations representative, told a news conference that the Australian and Indian complaints to the Security Council were unfounded.

Both Australia and India appealed to the United Nations Security Council yesterday to take urgent action to halt the fighting in Indonesia.

"Our dispute with the Indonesian republicans is like a dispute between your federal government and one of your states," Van Kleffens asserted.

The new envoy interrupted the conference at one point to receive a telephone call. Returning, he said he had just been advised from The Hague that there was "not a word of truth" in published reports that the Netherlands government was preparing to ask Britain to mediate.

Van Kleffens said that all political parties in the Netherlands, except the Communists, support the government's resort to force in Indonesia.

Asked whether he believed Communist pressure was involved in the situation, he said:

"Do you know any country where they are not exerting pressure? It would be surprising if Indonesia were an exception."

Van Kleffens, in response to another question, said he did not know whether he would be directed to serve again as his government's U. N. representative. He added that he considered the job as Ambassador a full-time one.

Van Kleffens told an inquirer he did not think Australia's Prime Minister was motivated by unfriendly feelings in referring the Indonesian issue to the Security Council.

Australia, he said, is deeply concerned because of a desire for security against any future attack from the north like the Japanese invasion after Pearl Harbor.

Voicing hope the Dutch military campaign would be completed soon, Van Kleffens said the Netherlands then would "like very much" for the United States to help reach a settlement in any way feasible.

Already, he said, the way has been opened for restoration of normal export trade. An American ship is due to sail in a few days with a cargo of rubber from the Java port of Cheribon, he reported.

Van Kleffens reported that he had received many messages from Americans demanding, "Why do you deny the Indonesians their freedom?"

His response, he said, is:

"It is we who want to bring these people freedom, which is being denied them by terroristic conditions in Indonesia."

Meat, Corn Export Halt Asked

A House Agriculture subcommittee yesterday called upon the Agriculture Department to halt all exports of corn and meat, and to proceed with shipments of wheat abroad "with caution."

If it does, the group predicted, meat will be cheaper and more plentiful this fall.

(The Agriculture Department announced two weeks ago that no corn would be exported in July, August or September. Meat shipments abroad were almost suspended early in July.)

The subcommittee, headed by Representative August H. Andresen (R., Minn.), declared that meat supplies, if exports are halted, should increase by 15 per cent during the fall and winter.

It stated that 445 million pounds of meat had been exported during the last 11 months, and added: "Should the export program be continued on the same scale, the prospect for lower meat prices may not be realized."

Andresen told newsmen that the Agriculture Department's payroll could be cut in half "without reducing in the least" its services.

The United States is not "an inexhaustible horn of plenty" capable of feeding the world, Andresen's group said.

In urging that corn exports be halted, it said that "corn is the key product to the Nation's meat supply." The size of the corn harvest will determine the amount of meat, poultry and dairy supplies this fall, it said.

"It will require at least 60 days of ideal corn growing weather and a late frost to assure even an average crop," the report says.

If this does not take place, it will be necessary to substitute other grains, such as wheat, barley and oats, for livestock and poultry feed, it said. Because of this, the committee recommended "caution in the export of wheat."

The Commodity Credit Corporation, which buys grain for export, was criticized "for not always exercising the best judgment."

"Large purchases over short time periods tend to dry up the available supply of what at terminal markets," the committee said.

The group expressed optimism about the sugar situation, and approved the ending of rationing of sugar for industrial users, ordered by the Agriculture Department last Monday.

The report also stated that potatoes "can be put to some worthwhile use, since there are hungry people in this country and abroad."

This reference recalled a heated argument about the department's program for disposal of surplus potatoes last May.

Truman Signs 5 Fund Bills To Run U. S.

Digging deep into the big stack of legislation on his desk, President Truman yesterday vetoed two bills and approved 57 others.

He signed five of the big appropriation bills needed to run the Government. They totaled nearly 16 billion dollars—close to half the total set up to finance Federal activities for the 12 months which began July 1.

Mr. Truman disapproved a bill giving the Interstate Commerce Commission approval power over issuance of securities for the Pullman (sleeping car) Co. That was all right with the President, but he said in a statement that the bill went so far as to "encourage the bankers' control of railroads."

The other vetoed bill was designed to make a Swedish native, Herman Trahn of New York, eligible for citizenship.

A legislative official has estimated that Mr. Truman had before him more than 200 bills after the adjournment rush of Congress last week. The White House has made no compilation.

Because of this pressure of work, the White House announced the President's news conference will not be held today, the usual day. It will be determined today whether it will be held later in the week.

Mr. Truman lost no time in attacking the work accumulated in the adjournment rush. He started on it immediately after his return yesterday from Kansas City and the funeral of his mother.

Allotted 10 days to pass on the bills after they reach his desk, the President took a couple dozen with him from the office to work on during the night.

Appropriation bills signed yesterday include:

War Department — $5,482,529,633.

Independent offices—$8,188,822,927, of which $6,964,457,080 goes to the Veterans Administration.

Agriculture Department—$613,146,826.

Government corporations—$35,400,000. These include the National Housing Agency, Tennessee Valley Authority and others.

Foreign aid and miscellaneous expenditures—$1,658,902,197. This includes the 400 million dollars Greek-Turkish assistance program for staving off communism; funds for relief in liberated nations; administration of occupied territories; rent control and other projects.

Other bills signed include:

Increasing by 20 per cent the payments to Civil War, Spanish-American, Boxer Rebellion and Philippine Insurrection veterans and their widows and children.

Allowing the Federal Reserve System to spend up to 10 million dollars on construction of branch banking facilities.

Strike Cuts Costa Rica Food Deliveries 80%

San Jose, Costa Rica, July 30 (U.P.).—Fifty to 100 per cent paralysis of normal activities continued today as a general strike against the government went into its ninth day.

A United Press survey showed that all banks remained closed, as did 95 per cent of wholesale and 50 per cent of retail stores.

Deliveries of milk and fresh vegetables were cut by 80 per cent.

Claiming they were not getting full guarantees of electoral freedom for the February 1948 presidential election, Newspaperman Otilio Ulate, presidential nominee of the Democratic Party, and his followers called the strike to back up their demands for fuller guarantees.

UNRRA Stops Shipments to North China

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Because Communist-controlled areas aren't getting their "fair share," United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration has cut off all remaining relief shipments to North China.

The shipments, of which 50,000 tons are still to be delivered out of 83,000 tons allocated, will not be resumed, UNRRA announced last night until "satisfactory arrangements for distribution of a fair share to Communist-controlled territories" have been made.

The suspension went into effect Monday. It applies to all of North China's active war zones.

UNRRA has made the following proposals:

1. That Chefoo be made a "closed port" under the laws of war during three specified weeks in August, September and October to enable UNRRA to get ships loaded with supplies into Chefoo.

No Military Activity

The same proposal provides that Communist authorities guarantee not to use Chefoo for any military activity while UNRRA ships are in port.

2. That UNRRA ship 23,000 tons of supplies from Tientsin down the Grand Canal into Communist-held territory in two two-week "blitz" delivery operations, the first in September and the other in October and November. This would require cessation of hostilities along the Grand Canal during the specified periods.

Arrangements are also being made, UNRRA announced, to find a working arrangement to continue the Yellow River project, now at a standstill because of hostilities. When plans for this work are agreed to by the Nationalist Government, UNRRA will attempt to get similar guarantees from the Communist leaders.

15-Day Deadline Set

UNRRA has a 15-day deadline for agreement by both parties. At the end of that period, the China program will be reconsidered by UNRRA, it states.

"In spite of continued assurances by the National Government," UNRRA said, "there have been several attacks by Nationalist Air Forces on relief ships carrying supplies to Communist ports."

UNRRA also reported "many interferences with the movement of UNRRA supplies and personnel into Communist-controlled areas, including supplies needed in the repair of the Yellow River dikes.

"Communist military activity has also on occasion interfered with the distribution of supplies."

Wedemeyer Plans Week's Tour of N. China But Arranges No Contacts With Communists

Nanking, China, July 30 (U.P.).—Lieut. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, head of President Truman's Far Eastern fact-finding mission, will start a one-week tour of north China Friday, but will not contact Chinese Communists, an American source said today.

Wedemeyer's mission has asked the Chinese government to state its attitude toward American businessmen in China. Americans have complained repeatedly of restrictions and have charged that certain Chinese firms have been "favored."

A high Chinese source said the government's reply to Wedemeyer would include a plan under which "restrictions on American and other foreign businessmen will be eased."

Nationalist troops cleared the Peiping-Hankow Railway of Communists and opened a new offensive on the northern sector of the Tientsin-Pukow line, Information Director Hollington K. Tong said.

Rice Plentiful But Dear

Hankow, China, July 30 (U.P.).—China's "rice bowl" in Hunan Province is bursting with grain but farmers cannot afford to buy their own rice.

Rice farmers were being fed with food shipped from the United States because they sold their crops in advance to Hunan merchants for food last winter.

Now the merchants are attempting to sell the rice back to the farmers—at 10 times the purchase price, or $4.50 per picul (about $180,000 Chinese for 133½ pounds.)

Few farmers can afford rice at this price and Hunan merchants are shipping the rice elsewhere. Meanwhile, UNRRA is shipping in milk and soup powder—and rice.

Sources from Changsha, capital of Hunan, reported that, though unplanted, the next rice crop has already been sold.

Justice Declines To Void Indictment Against Eisler

Justice ames W. Morris refused yesterday to dismiss an indictment charging Communist Gerhart Eisler with passport fraud.

The Government rested its case yesterday against Eisler, said to be a leading Kremlin agent in this country.

This morning's session in District Court is to be devoted to argument by defense counsel for a mistrial as well as motions to have Justice Morris direct a verdict of acquittal for Eisler.

The charges against Eisler resulted from what authorities said was fraudulently omitting from an application for an alien exit permit, information concerning his Communist activities.

Ford Rejects 'Lewis Clause,' Union Reports

Detroit, July 30 (AP).—The CIO United Auto Workers Union said today that the Ford Motor Co. has answered a flat "no" to its demand for a contract provision to dodge penalty provisions of the Taft-Hartley law. The company made an unrevealed informal counter-proposal.

The powerful union has threatened a strike of 108,000 Ford production workers over the country to back its demand for a "John L. Lewis" clause to escape legal liability for contract violations.

UAW Vice President Richard T. Leonard emerged from a one-hour meeting with Ford negotiators and said talks were stalemated.

"Both sides have exhausted every argument at their command," Leonard said. "The company has replied a flat no."

Harvester Offers Swap

Chicago, July 30 (AP).—The International Harvester Co. offered today to eliminate the no-strike clauses in its contracts if the unions would "give us your word in writing that you will take reasonable, positive action to stop wildcat strikes, up to the limit of your ability."

John L. McCaffrey, Harvester president, made the proposal in a letter to the firm's 83,000 employes in the United States, following what a company spokesman said was a request from the unions to eliminate the no-strike agreement because of enactment of the Taft-Hartly law.

McCaffrey said the unions contended that the Taft-Hartley Act's provision permitting an employer to sue a union for striking in violation of contract would "smash the unions."

McCaffrey, in his letter, said "All we are asking you to do is give us your word in writing that you will take reasonable, positive action to stop wildcat strikes, up to the limit of your ability.

"If you didn't do that, you would be open to suit—you ought to be." Union leaders were not available immediately for comment.

Veteran Who Tackled German To Marry Teacher Saturday

The Washington Post
PLAN CHURCH WEDDING
Paul Egly and Miss Fontaine

An Army veteran who had "time on his hands" in Konigstein, Germany, and decided to spend it learning German, will marry his teacher here Saturday.

Although Paul Egly, 26-year-old former Army Medical Corps second lieutenant, didn't leran much German, he helped his future bride, Marion de la Fontaine, 24, improve her English, which she speaks with a French accent. Born in Munich, she was brought up in Paris.

Marion, who is, as Paul says, "very pretty, with light brown hair, brown eyes and a very nice tan," arrived here from Konigstein Monday. Temporarily quartered at the Lafayette Hotel, her "at home" address will be 6316 8th st. nw., where Paul found a one-room basement apartment after three weeks' search.

Marion met Paul, who will enter George Washington University Law School this fall, in September, 1945 in Konigstein, wheres she worked as a photographer, specializing in babies' pictures. Paul, who knew he would be in Germany for about six months more, asked if she would teach him German. Although the German lessons fell through, the romance flourished.

Marion has been shopping and sightseeing with her future sister-in-alw, Mrs. C. J. Murphy of Atlanta, Ga., since her arrival. "She seems to be more at home here than I am," Paul said. Egly came here two months ago from Beverly Hills, Calif.

Sleeping Tablets Again Hospitalize Friend of 'Bugsy'

Paris, July 30 (U.P.).—Virginia Hill, intimate friend of the slain gangster "Bugsy" Siegel, was in the hospital again today after taking too many sleeping pills Saturday night for the second time during her visit to France.

Doctors denied she had tried to commit suicide.

Miss Hill will be well enough to go back to the United States shortly, the doctors said. David Green, apress agent friend of Miss Hill, said she had been ordered by the American Embassy to leave France tomorrow, but this could not be verified at the embassy.

MP Is Found Guilty of Contempt of Commons

London, July 30.—A Labor member of the Commons was today found "guilty of an aggravated contempt of the House and of a gross breach of privilege" in selling reports of secret Labor Party meetings to the London "Evening Standard" for £30 (approximately $120) weekly.

The member was Gerry Allighan, a journalist who represents the Gravesend, Kent, constituency.

Experience has taught Millions of Americans:

there's no gin like Gordon's

—because Gordon's has the advantage of LIQUEUR QUALITY and HIGH PROOF (94.4)

You'll welcome this definite advantage. For Liqueur Quality means richer flavor—velvety smoothness. And High Proof, 94.4 means sustained flavor—drinks that never taste thin. Experience has taught millions of Americans—there's no gin like GORDON'S. That's why it's important to ask for GORDON'S when ordering gin . . . by the bottle or the drink.

Baptists Pick Washington For World Headquarters

Copenhagen, Denmark, July 30 (U.P.).—The executive committee of the World Baptist Congress announced today that it had decided to establish world headquarters in Washington, D. C., with other offices in London.

Delegates paid tribute to the church's late world president, Dr. J. H. Rushbrooke of Britain, and heard Dr. Louie Newton, president of the Southern Paptist Convention, preach a crusade against communism and clerical fascism.

Dr. C. Oscar Johnson of St. Louis, Mo., told the 5000 delegates that he represented 12 million Americans and expressed their sorrow at the death of Rushbrooke.

Johnson is the favored candidate for the next world President. Chairman of the nominating committee is Dr. Theodore F. Adams of Richmond, Va.

[Dr. Newton said the only way to combat communism was to "outthink them, out-pray them, outwork and out-give them."

Editor Assails U. S. Funds Use for Church Aid

Buffalo, N. Y., July 31 (AP).—The international convention of the Disciples of Christ was told today it should resist the efforts of any church to obtain "an official connection with the government or a financial connection with the public treasury."

Dr. Adams

Charles Clayton Morrison, Chicago, founder and editor emeritus of the Christian Century, weekly religious publication, criticized as unconstitutional the continuance of Myron C. Taylor as the President's Ambassador to the Vatican and the use of public money for textbooks and bus transportation for pupils of parochial schools.

Earlier, Spencer P. Austin, Indianapolis, Ind., National director of evangelism for the United Christian Missionary Society, declared that "whatever else the church may undertake, evangelism must hold a central place—else fruitlessness will fall of all her labors."

The Rev. J. P. Miller of Elmore, Ohio, was elected president of the rural fellowship movement of the Disciples.

He succeeds Edward D. Hammer of Livingston, Tenn., who was chosen as a member of the executive committee.

2 to 43 Years for Rape

Milwaukee, July 30 (AP).—Bernard Sylvester Schuetzmann was sentenced to two consecutive terms of one to 35, and one to eight years in State's prison at Waupun today after being found guilty of rape and assault regardless of human life in the May 25 attack on a 5-year-old girl.

India Picks Army Chiefs

New Delhi, India, July 30 (U.P.).—The Hindu and Moslem provisional governments said today that British officers had been chosen to command their separate armies, navies and air forces when India is partitioned into two dominions August 15.

CIO Steel Union Sued for $75,000 Under Labor Law

Chicago, July 30 (AP).—The Globe Company, manufacturers of packinghouse machinery, today filed suit against the CIO United Steelworkers Union under the Taft-Hartley Act asking damages of $75,000 plus $30,000 weekly for a current strike at the plant.

The petition, filed in Federal court, declared the union went on strike on July 14 in violation of a no-strike clause in its contract. Company attorneys said they believed the suit was the first such filed under the new labor law, which allows for such damages.

The contract, the petition said, is effective until April 1, 1948. Union officers "knowingly and wilfull ydid wholly disregard and violate the terms" of the agreement by causing the company's 500 employees "to take part in a strike . . . thereby causing an complete stoppage of production . . .," the petition said.

The petition further asserted that the union had "failed to counsel and direct and require" its members to return to work.

Stadium Urged For Arlington War Memorial

A proposal to erect an Arlington County athletic field and stadium as a war memorial was disclosed yesterday by Frank L. Ball, jr., Arlington attorney.

Ball said he would offer a bill at the next session of the State legislature to provide for joint construction and ownership by the school board and the county board. Under his plan, schools would have a priority on its use.

The bill would provide that the school board be permitted to accept donations for the project. The county board could appropriate funds over and above those allocated in the school budget.

Ball suggested that the money remaining from last year's unsuccessful attempt to build a memorial be donated to this new plan.

Bones Buried For 150,000,000 Years Due Here

The Smithsonian Institution announced yesterday that a shipment of bones of 35 giant salamander-like creatures that lived on earth 150 million years ago was en route from New Mexico.

The bones were unearthed by Dr. D. H. Dunkle, Smithsonian paleontologist, under 7 feet of soil on a Santa Fe ranch.

Remains of amphibians known as stereospondyls, the bones will be reconstructed to assist scientists studying what life was like in the Triassic period, the beginning of the Age of Reptiles.

While remains of stereospondyls have been found in most puarters of the globe, few had been discovered in this country before the New Mexico pocket was found in 1936.

10 Slot Machine Operators Fined After Ocean City Raid

Ocean City, Md., July 30 (AP).—Ten persons, including the daughter of a city councilman, were fined $50 and costs each today for operating slot machines in this lively summer resort.

Magistrate James B. Robins imposed the fines after all the defendants pleaded guilty.

And while the brief hearings were held in the magistrate's office here, the Salisbury Times published a story quoting Mayor Daniel Trimper:

"If there are any slot machines here, I don't know where they are. I don't go into night clubs and places like that."

All 10 defendants were named in warrants sworn by Worcester County Sheriff Arthur W. Duer after he and a flying squad raided the resort boardwalk Monday night. Planned as a surprise, the raid lost some of its sting, the sheriff said later, when it appeared some of the alleged boardwalk games people were tipped-off beforehand.

Mrs. Evelyn Adams, daughter of Councilman Rudolph Dolle, was among those fined. Her father appeared in her place and paid the fine.

The name of Mayor Trimper's brother, Granville, also was called in court in connection with a warrant issued after seizure of a "one-armed bandit" earlier this year. The case was postponed, however, because of his illness.

Fined for operating the coin jiggers were: Mrs. Adams; John Hagan, Samuel Taustine, Edward Evans, jr., Archie Wilkins, Thomas Shill, Marty Mitnick, Joe Rappaport, A. M. Jackson and Joseph Fels.

Both Evans and Shill were absent, but had representatives in court.

Nathan Rappaport was fined $25 and costs for operating a gaming device "played by minors" July 27. Rappaport was charged with running a numbered wheel.

Witness Supports Defendant's Story In Court Martial

New York, July 30 (AP).—A Navy court martial trying a chief signalman on charges of maltreating fellow prisoners and reporting their escape plans to the Japanese heard today that an American Army private was bayonetted to death for reporting a Japanese guard who stole American prisoners' food.

Harold E. Hirshberg, 29, the defendant, is accused of telling Japanese at Camp Murphy, Luzon, Philippine Islands, of the escape plan of Army Pvt. George Garrett of Waco, Tex., who was killed by the Japanese "on or about March 1, 1944." The prosecution contends that Garrett's death was due to the reporting of his escape plan.

However, an affidavit of a fellow prisoner, stated that Garrett was bayonetted by Lieut. Yoshi Koshi, camp commander, because he reported a Japanese sergeant for stealing food from the prisoners' galley.

Death Toll in French Explosion Rises to 19

Brest, July 30 (AP).—French officials today announced the discovery of a new victim, bringing to 19 the number of known deaths resulting from the blast of nitrate aboard the Norwegian freighter Ocean Liberty on Monday.

Officials estimated damages at $12,500,000.

City Council of Baltimore Blamed for Delay In Surveying Expressway to Washington

Baltimore, July 30 (AP).—Failure of Baltimore's City Council to approve a $300,000 expenditure for a preliminary survey was blamed today by Chairman Robert M. Reindollar of the State Roads Commission for holding up the Washington-Baltimore expressway.

Uncertainty of the city's intentions may even cause the loss of $1,485,409 allocated by the Federal Public Roads Administration under its urban highways program, said Reindollar.

The roads commissioner added that Public Works Director Nathan L. Smith had written that Mayor D'Alesandro was anxious to utilize the Federal funds. Smith said he would broach the matter again when the Mayor returns from a vacation.

Smith declared the City Council should act promptly after reconvening September 22 if it is to benefit by the Federal outlay.

The State's part of the project would be a road from the end of the federally constructed highway, south of the Camp Meade rd., to South Baltimore near the old Annapolis rd. Reindollar said plans were based on Baltimore's proposed freeway on the "Smith Line," from the old Annapolis rd. to the vicinity of Ostend st.

The "line" was informally labeled for the public works director.

Roads commission plans for the expressway were halted after the City Council voted down a $300,000 appropriation from its 10 million dollar expressway loan to complete plans for the first part of its "Smith line."

Reindollar said that original Washington-Baltimore project plans called for the Federal Government to build the section between the District line and Jessups.

If the seven-month stalemate continues, Reindollar went on, the roads commission will divert Federal moneys to another municipality which has formulated highway plans and has matching funds available. Both Cumberland and Hagerstown now have projects ready he said.

Meanwhile formal opening of the new 22-mile highway between Hagerstown and Frederick will be delayed another three or four weeks.

Belasco Theater

The use that is being made of the old Belasco Theater, known originally as the Lafayette Square Opera House, received congressional notice in the hurried closing days of the session. The Bender Subcommittee of the House Expenditures Committee questioned the Commissioner of Public Buildings, W. E. Reynolds, respecting the possibility of renting the structure, now owned by the Government and partially occupied by the Treasury Department, to some theatrical producer for the presentation of stage plays. The idea is one which this newspaper urged not long ago as desirable from the point of view of the community's cultural life.

We were guilty of an overstatement in referring to the Belasco as a warehouse and in disparaging the Treasury's use of the building. In point of fact there are offices along the entire front of the theater of which the Treasury makes active use for both personnel and live files. The whole orchestra of the theater, however, can be employed only for dead storage; old desks are piled on top of one another there, gathering dust, while the balconies accommodate dead files. At best, the Treasury's use of the space is makeshift and wasteful in comparison with its potentialities if it were employed for its original purpose.

Mr. Reynolds told the Bender Subcommittee that "we think the time is coming, with the reduction in the people in Washington, when other space could be given to Treasury so that this building could be used as a theater." And he added, later in his testimony, that he was "sympathetic with the proposal to use this building as a theater, first (because) it would be of great help to the people of the City of Washington because they have a shortage of downtown theaters; and secondly, (because) I cannot see how it is possible to consider the construction of a building on that location inside of five years."

We feel certain that this sympathy for the people of Washington is shared by Treasury officials. They could best give it expression by offering to lease the theater, until such time as they are able to utilize the site for a new structure, to any responsible theatrical entrepreneur willing to recondition it and to use it for the entertainment of the local public.

Tu Quoque!

Yesterday Mr. Howard Hughes managed to heave a few stones into the gleaming glass house within which Senator Brewster has been conducting his investigations into the wartime allocation of airplane contracts. In a statement issued at Los Angeles Mr. Hughes asserted that, on a date not specified, the Senator had invited him to lunch at the Mayflower and there agreed to call off the whole investigation on one condition. The condition, according to Mr. Hughes, was that he agree to merge his Trans-World Airline with Mr. Juan Trippe's Pan American Airways.

Mr. Hughes said that he told Senator Brewster that he had already discussed the matter with Mr. Trippe and had promised an answer within thirty days. Evidently the negotiations over this matter continued for some time; anyway Mr. Hughes asserts that Mr. Trippe himself urged Senator Brewster to postpone the investigation in the hope that some agreement about the merger would be reached. In the end, however, Mr. Hughes decided that the terms offered by Mr. Trippe were not "equitable from the standpoint of the other stockholders of my company."

The plain implication here is that Senator Brewster has been attempting to use his status and powers as chairman of the War Investigating Committee as a weapon of coercion or intimidation in the interest of a private business corporation. Political blackmail might not be too strong a word for it, if Mr. Hughes' allegations can be sustained. And it must be said that they are given a certain surface plausibility by the fact that both Mr. Brewster and the Pan American Airways are among the strongest proponents of legislation in favor of what is called "the chosen instrument" policy in overseas commercial air operations. This legislation would give a virtual monopoly of such operations to a single airline company to be created for the purpose, and which would in the nature of things be dominated by the Pan American Airways interests.

It may be, of course, that Senator Brewster's motives in all this are purely patriotic; that he earnestly believes that the creation of an overseas air monopoly would be advantageous to us all. But this is scarcely a case in which the end can be said to justify the means. If the means have been what Mr. Hughes alleges, they have been thoroughly disreputable. For that reason Senator Brewster owes the public a full and unequivocal statement concerning his relationship with Mr. Trippe and of his conversations with Mr. Hughes.

To be sure Mr. Hughes' statement has little enough to do with the ostensible purpose of the investigation, namely to throw light on the methods whereby important war contracts were solicited and allocated. But it does provide another and even sadder commentary on the present state of business and political morals.

Next In Greece

The Russian veto on the resolution to send a more or less permanent commission to the Greek frontier has a symbolic significance. The resolution was offered under Chapter 6 of the Charter. This is the chapter containing the clauses providing the peace machinery of the United Nations. Under it the Security Council may investigate any dispute or any situation that might lead to international friction or give rise to a dispute. That the border warfare in Greece is such a situation is so obvious that, as the French say, it springs to the eyes. Yet the Russians, with the Poles at their heels, said no to the proposal for a fact-finding commission to take the place of the temporary body that is now there. This refusal, which constitutes a veto on action, is symbolic of the breakdown of peacemaking machinery.

But the discussion of the Greek trouble should not yet be wound up. The Security Council, it seems to us, should now proceed to Chapter 7, which contains the articles providing for action with respect to threats to the peace. A resolution should now be framed declaring that the situation in Greece constitutes a threat to the peace. If this is agreed upon, then the Charter allows of recommendations. The recommendation in this case should be that the parties should lay down their arms pending further recommendations. Of course, there is not a chance that the Russians, having thrown out the peacemaking machinery, would agree that war-prevention machinery should be taken up. But the record of Russian non-cooperation should be underlined, if only for the sake of the remaining few who think that Russian intentions are misunderstood.

It should now be crystal clear what fate would have attended a reference to the United Nations of the Greek plea for aid which this country heeded and provided. The Russians, of course, would have turned it down. They now advertise themselves as uninterested in the maintenance of Balkan peace. The U. N.'s Balkan Commission found that peace was endangered by guerilla warfare against the Greek frontiers fomented by Albania, Yugoslavia and Bulgaria. The exact words of the indictment are: "Yugoslavia and to a lesser extent Bulgaria and Albania have supported the guerilla warfare in Greece," that "actual training in partisan warfare was given to selected personnel" in special camps and schools in these countries, and that the students in these schools "were subjected to political indoctrination and propaganda looking toward the overthrow of the Greek government." In other words, an undeclared war is in progress against Greece conducted by Greece's neighbors mainly through a Greek fifth column. On the basis of these facts the Balkan Commission recommended a guaranty of those frontiers by a permanent U. N. Commission. Russia, in refusing to accept either U. N.'s view of the matter or U. N.'s invocation of peacemaking, has in spirit flouted the United Nations.

Of course, Russia is acting within the terms of the Charter in rejecting the resolution. She is empowered, as are all the great powers, to disallow the investigative process from being undertaken. By the same token, however, this country is empowered to take unilateral action. Article 51 says that > Nothing in the present Charter shall impair the inherent right of individual or collective self-defense if an armed attack occurs against a member of the United Nations, until the Security Council has taken the measures necessary to maintain international peace and security. Measures taken by members in the exercise of this right of self-defense shall be immediately reported to the Security Council and shall not in any way affect the authority and responsibility of the Security Council under the present Charter to take at any time such action as it deems necessary in order to maintain or restore international peace and security.

It is surely our duty under this article to take whatever action is needed. Let us keep on talking at Lake Success and start acting unmistakably in Greece. In the circumstances half-measures are worse than no action at all. In view of our aid program in Greece, we cannot afford to let the conspiracy succeed against Greece. The Russian veto means that Russia and her satellites mean business in Greece, and there should be the same response that last year we made when a similar situation arose in Trieste.

Breach Of Contract

One of the abuses that the Taft-Hartley Labor Act seeks to prevent is breach of contract. Under weak or irresponsible labor leadership strikes in violation of the terms of an agreement frequently occur, depriving employers and workers, too, of the benefits resulting from collective bargaining agreements designed to insure peaceful and uninterrupted operations during the period for which the contract runs. The attempt at suppression of outlaw or wildcat strikes aims, therefore, not only to protect the employer from losses resulting from sporadic strikes, but to strengthen unions as bargaining agencies—by requiring either party to an agreement to give 60 days written notice of any proposed change in or termination of a contract, and to continue to operate under the existing agreement during the 60-day cooling-off period. Employers can, moreover, sue unions for losses resulting from violation of contract terms.

The agreement recently signed with John L. Lewis' miners providing that the contract shall be applicable to miners only so long as they are "able and willing to work" has been frequently cited by critics as evidence of intent to evade these provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act. But, as pointed out in a statement of the U. S. Steel Corp., this clause merely asserts the right of the individual to work or not, as he chooses—a right specifically affirmed by the act itself. However, owing to the penalties to which unions are subject under the terms of the act for contract violations several thousand employes of the Murray Corp. belonging to the United Automobile Workers have struck to enforce demands for a protective clause in their contract that would enable the union to escape damage suits for breach of contract. Ford employes of the UAW are likewise threatening to strike in order, it is alleged, to obtain a pledge from the company not to sue for damages from work stoppages in violation of the contract.

Not only do we question the validity of agreements deliberately designed to evade the punitive provisions of the new labor act in regard to wildcat strikes, but employers signing such agreements are in effect engaging in a conspiracy to destroy the much needed safeguards that the law has erected for the benefit of industry as well as the community at large. We sympathize with the desire of the unions to escape being penalized for unauthorized strikes by members whose actions it cannot control. But we think necessary protection can be accorded them without violating either the letter or the spirit of the Taft-Hartley Act.

Under one recently signed contract, for example, union representatives agree not to participate in any wildcat strikes or in any way encourage them. The employing company is also conceded full liberty to discipline employes who participate in unauthorized strikes. By thus defining the limits of union responsibility and firmly dissociating unions from illegal acts of individual members, the objectives of the Taft-Hartley Act can, we believe, be achieved without laying unions open to payment of damages for breach of contract if the illegal acts complained of are clearly beyond their power to control. Like other sections of the act, it seems to us that the terrors of the breach of contract provisions are largely the product of fevered imaginations or of deliberate interpretative distortion.

Speak Softly, Sergeant!

In "abolishing" profanity and hard-boiled tactics on the part of its noncoms, the Army is catering to the sensitivities of the recruits it hopes to attract. Not only will the Ground Forces no longer condone abusive language, according to an announcement by General Devers, but they are going in for modernized leadership with a capital L. They even plan to stimulate the cultural life of the rookies with such collegiate appurtenances as amateur theatricals. All this is part of the post-war military establishment in which uniforms actually fit, food can be downed without a grimace, and pay goes further than just cigarettes. What a change!

And doubtless the anti-profanity approach will be effective, though the Army is going to have quite a job in remodeling its veterans and the new order may occasion some caustic sotto voce remarks about Boy Scouts from old-timers hardened to a diet of invective. There is no demonstrated correlation between commands emphasized by profanity and fighting efficiency, we suppose, and probably noncoms could have been talking softly all these years had anyone bothered to analyze it.

Nonetheless, something will be lost in replacing the tough and salty top-sergeant with the new and mild-mannered edition, no matter how crisp and efficient the successor may be. It will be like the cavalry giving way to tanks. The color will be gone, a victim of the mechanized age. Maybe persuasion can be relied upon to galvanize action as quickly as the raucous bawling of an angry sergeant, but somehow we doubt it. There is something electric about the vocabulary of a crusty and bellowing top-kick that subordinates can remember nostalgically long after the other aspects of their Army careers have been forgotten. Whatever else may be said about it, it certainly gets things done.

FORGOTTEN COUNTRY

(For J.)

In the forgotten countries of the heart
The cities sleep enchanted; the green river
Winds lost among pale willow-trees forever
Where on swift-plumaged wings the wild birds dart

Above the slumbering forest to the sky
Where spellbound in a dream the young ghosts wait;
Blue flowers are withered now; the hour grows late.
Beyond the crumbling wall weeds rise sword-high.

But one has found at last the secret pathway;
With laurel-leaf and heart's-ease in his hand,
Has seen as in a dream the bright lost land
Lie open to his gaze; the owl's gold eye.

Staring from twisted tree, from moldering tower;
Has heard (and no one there) a light footfall,
And following past forsaken court and wall
Has plucked from weed-choken grass the guarded flower.

Who speaks? Who calls his name, as kneeling there
He sees the bright ghosts laughing at his plunder,
Within his ears a far Word, blown like thunder,

Youth Cult Meets Test

By Malvina Lindsay

Battle Of The Bulges

WOMEN ARE DOING much indignant talking, even some petition signing, against the new radically changed fall clothes. Whether this will reach a Bunker Hill stage will be determined this month when the season's buying gets under way.

Part of this indignation is economic. The most sudden and revolutionary change in a quarter century has outmoded feminine wardrobes almost overnight. Prices for new clothes will be 10 to 15 per cent higher than a year ago.

An even greater fomenter of feminine rebellion is the older look in clothes given by longer skirts, drooping shoulders, bulky hips and hats, dark stockings. It is an abrupt turning away from the pursuit of streamlined youth that has dominated sartorial and social life since the First World War.

The fashion industry, however, is armed for the forthcoming battle of the bulges. It must hold its own with refrigerators and motor cars, see that soft goods follows the coal-steel trend. Billions are at stake. Last year sales of women's apparel and accessories amounted to $9,028,000,000. In 1945 (before price controls were lifted and before weddings reached high tide) sales volume was $7,685,000,000. Back in 1941 it was only $4,157,000,000.

HENCE, salesmanship this season is prepared to break down women's long, determined resistance to long skirts and curved hips. Most general complaint against the new syles, "they make me look too old," is answered by, "But, Madam, they make you look feminine and elegant, they give you emotional appeal." Big Bertha of the rebuttal on long skirts is, "But, Madam, the short skirt is definitely declasse." It is also emphasized that the "long silhouette" makes one look taller, hence slimmer, and that hip pulkiness makes the waist seem smaller, hides lower bulges.

The eve of battle finds the industry confident. Trade publications report—with a slight note of forced optimism—that women in most of the larger cities are accepting the new styles. Fashion experts are predicting success for them. Retailers though have been cautious in their buying, many of them waiting to see how August business goes.

So far acceptance has come chiefly from high style customers who buy early, and buy higher priced goods. The budget trade, especially office workers — who started the petition movement in Louisville, Ky.—are offering the main resistance. Also teen-agers, who for two decades have tried to look like kindergarteners, are giving trouble. Some manufacturers have compromised with them by making hems adjustable, like those in men's trousers.

SINCE fashions are generally determined by those at the top, the apparel industry is relying on the carriage trade, which is believed bored with six years' monotony of styles, to put over the big fashion revolution. Nevertheless the feminine youth trend is a tough opponent. Efforts to bring down rising skirts and keep them down have failed several times since 1920. The streamlined figure, with its accompanying dieting, casual clothes and sports activities, has become well intrenched in American life.

Steadily the feminine ideal has grown slimmer and younger. The "perfect 38" shrunk to a size 14 or 12 or less. Magazine advice on how to look young, once directed solely to those in the fatal 30s, was extended to the "fascinating 40s," then to the "young 50s." Teen-agers have taken the spotlight in national interest.

The fashion industry, in its desire to hold its place in the post-war sun, may find it has overreached itself. Most women were ready for some fashion change. Many felt that skirts certainly had reached an unesthetic height. But they did not expect revolution. Fashion's natural pace is evolution. Its changes are gradual, never abrupt. It moves in cycles, and undoubtedly a new turn, long delayed by wartime restrictions, was inevitable. But the turning seems to have been artificially accelerated.

The common sense of the American woman will probably take care of the economic problem this has caused, and even force a compromise on the style side. Anyone betting on the battle ahead would do well to regard hips as bearish.

Federal Retirement

There doubtlessly will be much discussion pro and con as to what the recently adjourned session of Congress did or left undone. What this writer is most concerned about is the scurvy treatment accorded the civil service retirement bill—a bill that affects the welfare of two million Federal employes, most of whom have grown old and infirm in the Federal service. The excuse of the Republican-dominated Congress is that it didn't have time to act on the bill—a bill that had been overwhelmingly indorsed by both houses of Congress and would have taken only a few minutes of the expiring session to pass.

That the action—or nonaction—on this measure will have political repercussions is indicated by the blast of Senator Langer. It is hard to escape the conviction that had the bill affected the welfare or salaries of individual Congressmen, there would have been found plenty of time to pass it.

German Industry

The French government and some liberals in this country are opposed to implementing the Marshall Plan in such a way as to restore Germany as a war-making nation. At the same time the industrial recovery of Germany is admitted to be essential to the economic rehabilitation of Europe as a whole. It would be unfortunate if the plan should break down only because statesmen lack the vision to resolve this crucial dilemma.

No successful solution is possible if we assume industry in Germany and the rest of Europe will be government-owned and operated. Socialism in Germany would inevitably mean the resuscitation of Germany as a nation capable of very dangerous war industries development. We must suggest some new type of free privately owned and operated industry through which this dangerous development can be avoided.

Government should give technical aids to private producers, provide for partial ownership by employes in the industries where they work, give limited market guarantees for consumer goods, require minimum guaranteed wages, allow the main consumers of raw materials and capital goods to fix their competitive prices, and temporarily allocate scarce raw materials where they will do the most good. This sort of free business should attract support from workers in Europe and it should be competent to do the necessary rehabilitation job.

The political dangers from a revived German economy could then be dealt with. Germans might exchange private ownership in heavy industry (potential war industry) for private ownership in light industry, with their neighbors. This would require considerable movement of peoples in western Europe, but such an event is inevitable if Europe is to be politically and economically unified. The exchange of properties would then mean that the majority stock ownership in German war industries will be controlled by non-Germans.

If the democratic powers maintain adequate military controls in Germany for 10 years, these new private property rights can be protected, and there will be no opportunity for reborn Nazi groups to rebuild a national military economy. Yet the coal, steel, machinery and other industires so vital to the continental recovery will become able to produce again the large quantities of goods required to raise the people from the business quagmire they are now in, and France will have nothing to fear politically from the revival of industry in Germany.

As has been pointed out generally by some leaders, the Marshall Plan should be used not only to promote European recovery but also to promote economic freedom, the lessening of nationalism and political liberty everywhere.

Pilot Error

Your Civil Aeronautics Board inquiry into the DC-4 crash in Newfoundland on October 3 has now been published. It purports to have found that (1) the pilot's failure to observe takeoff rules was cause of the disaster and (2) that the plane was properly functioning at the time.

Just one more pilot deprived, because of death, from possibly justifying his course of action, publicly blamed and vilified.

Did it not occur to any member of the CAB that this plane, once risen from the runway, may not have turned to the right because the pilot, through no fault of his own, was suddenly and unknowingly deprived of the power to direct it to the right? Notwithstanding whatever dial readings may have been recorded when found, did it not strike the CAB that these dial recordings may have been erroneous readings, that they may not have recorded that which the pilot actually attempted to perform? Admitting that the plane may have been in perfect functionable order before leaving the ground, who of the CAB can deny that the sudden collapse of just one small cogwheel may have caused both readings and controls to have gone haywire?

Can you, when your watch, broken, lying in smithereens on the ground, find and identify the one small nut or broken cogwheel, which before the final smash had caused this watch of yours to cease to properly function? Short of a miracle, it would be unidentifiable. The self-same reasoning applies, in every respect, to planes.

"Exodus 1947"

Your editorial of July 23, "Exodus 1947," was reprinted in the New York Herald Tribune of July 26, as an appeal for the Jews who have tried to enter Palestine illegally. Why blame the British for the thankless task of enforcing the law? Would the United States use force to prevent illegal immigration? These Jews, knowing the conditions, deliberately set sail, of their own choice, and prepared to use force upon the British. However one pities their plight, they are responsible for this outcome of misfortune. Furthermore, do we wish to become involved in an Arab uprising? One can scarcely blame the Arabs for promising war when their national integrity is at stake.

Surely our Nation and others should voluntarily receive the displaced persons, including the Jews, and not further this aggression upon a weaker people.

General Sales Tax

Let us ask for a national referendum on replacing our income taxes with a general sales tax. Such a tax would not be applicable to food, and a very small tax would be placed on farm machinery and equipment. A graduated form of taxes could be levied so that those in the lower income brackets would pay only nominal taxes.

Our Congressmen have turned thumbs down on this form of taxation for many years. In the cities where they now have a sales tax there has been no hardship and it is paid without any grumbling by the people.

This is the most equitable form of taxation. It would allow private individuals in business to build up their enterprises as they have in the past. Those who have initiative can develop new industries and give much employment to the people.

Korean Government

The effort and hope of American and Korean leaders to make the Russian-American joint conference in Korea a success are wrecked again by Russia's persistant objection to the participation of the Korean rightists and nationalists in the consultation and formation of an all-Korea government.

The Korean nationalists and rightists constitute the overwhelming majority of Korean population while Communists make up the smallest minority; but every patriotic Korean hoped for an all-Korea government and still wants such a government in which the majority and the minority might work together.

Russia's shattering of this hope by her determination to impose communism on the unwilling 25 million non-Communist Koreans leaves no alternative, now, other than the immediate formation of Korean government in the United States occupied South Korea. This will be incomparably better for all concerned than to allow Korea to drift deeper into misery and ruin caused by Russia's hindrances.

"Red" Scare Smokescreen

In order to pierce the fog raised by the current "red" scare, and to expose some of the originators of the induced hysteria which now grips the most powerful Nation on earth, we submit these questions:

Is it necessary in defending our democratic system against agents of a police state to transform our Government into a Fascist oligarchy with the FBI and the Thomas Committee on Un-American Activities acting as our "thought police"?

Why do away with our Anglo-Saxon system of an open hearing for the accused (faced with his accuser) before an impartial body, in order to eliminate the few real subversives among Federal employes? Note the Rees loyalty bill in full and compare it with the procedure of the Spanish Inquisition!

Why does the Committee on Un-American Activities consider a person "subversive" for being against Spanish dictator Franco?

Why does the aiding of Spanish Republican refugees in France mark one for questioning by the Thomas-Rankin group, as it did last winter when the Unitarian Service Commission was haled before the Un-American Committee?

Why has the aforementioned committee refused to investigate pro-Fascist organizations like the so-called Christian Front, and hounded liberal newspaper and radio commentators and anti-Fascist groups, stigmatizing all as "red fronts"?

Since the jury which tried Douglas Stewart in the sedition trial was composed of only those who did not read certain allegedly leftist publications, in all fairness why didn't Judge R. B. Keech, who recently tried the directors of the Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee, weed out all prospective jurors who were readers of rightist publications?

Why have Jews been made the objects of vilification by Representative Rankin and O'Konski on the House floor without a reprimand from Speaker Martin?

Why were Norman Corwin, Selden Menefee, Johannes Steel and Robert St. John labeled "red-fronters" at a recent session of the Un-American Committee without being given a chance to refute the charge?

Why did Representative Fred Busbey oppose the printing of Fascism in Action, and why did he object to the anti-Franco portion?

In all justice, since Mr. Walter Steele denounced the New Republic before the Thomas Committee, why doesn't the Congressman from New Jersey hear a witness who will condemn an anti-Semitic, pro-Fascist sheet published in New Jersey? Do Americans know that this subversive sheet lumps reds, Protestants and "internationalism" together as a triple threat to our way of life? Shouldn't it be investigated?

Shouldn't J. Parnell Thomas give the public a chance to learn the names of this weekly's backers, among them former Governor Earle of Pennsylvania and Representative Alvin O'Konski of Wisconsin?

Why are attacks on Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam and the Federal Council of Churches made on Capitol Hill and in the native Fascist press simultaneously?

Again The Veto

By Barnet Nover

Russia Obstructs The U. N.

AFTER FOUR and a half months, a final and conclusive answer has now been given to those clamorous critics who, last March, assailed President Truman's Greek-Turkish aid program because it allegedly short-circuited the United Nations.

NOVER

The answer was given by Andrei Gromyko of Russia at Monday's session of the U. N. Security Council. It consisted in a veto of the American resolution to establish a semi-permanent 11-nation conciliation and inspection commission in the Balkans.

The object of the American proposal was to place the authority of the United Nations behind the effort to prevent an explosion in the Balkan powder keg.

Certainly nothing could be more in line with the principles and the purposes of the Charter.

RUSSIA would have none of it.

Gromyko's veto—the eleventh in 18 months—should destroy any lingering doubts in the minds of well-meaning people as to Russia's role in the U. N.

The grim fact is that Russia has no interest in the new international organization as an impartial agency for the settlement of international disputes. If Russia cannot have them settled in her own way she is not interested in having them settled at all.

She is not in the least concerned that the situation along Greece's northern border constitutes, in the eyes of the great majority of the Security Council, a real threat to the peace.

On the contrary, the support which Yugoslavia, and to a lesser extent Bulgaria and Albania, have given to guerrilla activities against the Greek government fits in perfectly with the Kremlin's plans.

Those plans call for the destruction of the present Greek government and the setting up of a regime at Athens that would be as willing to do Russia's bidding as are the governments at Sofia, Belgrade, Tirana and elsewhere in the Balkans and eastern Europe.

FOR REASONS not yet altogether clear, Russia did, last December, permit the Council to set up a Balkan commission to investigate on the spot Greek complaints of border violations. Gromyko did not actually vote in favor of that plan. But he abstained and that was sufficient.

Gromyko may have been prompted by the widespread criticism of Russia's frequent use of the veto. Various proposals had been made in last autumn's General Assembly that the veto be curbed. Russia regarded this movement with sufficient seriousness to be represented at some of those discussions by Foreign Minister Molotov himself.

Another reason for Russia's abstention at that time may have been the belief that the Balkan commission could be used as an instrument against the Greek government. The attempt was made. It failed.

In any event, Russia has now fully uncovered her hand, not only by her veto but also by the terms of the resolution introduced by Gromyko as a substitute for the American resolution.

Despite the report of the Balkan Commission, Gromyko would have the Council censure not Yugoslavia, Albania and Bulgaria, but Greece. His resolution also calls for the immediate expulsion of all foreign military personnel from Greece and for U. N. supervision of all foreign economic aid to Greece.

FACED by the obvious inability of the U. N. to take effective action to preserve the sovereignty of Greece, the United States was forced to act on its own.

To have turned the problem of Greek aid over to the U. N. would have meant postponing that aid until Greece was in a Soviet strait-jacket, another victim of Soviet infiltration.

Under existing circumstances, in fact, the best that the U. N. can do in the way of peace-preservation activities is to serve as a back-stop to efforts made outside the U. N.

Despite Russian obstructionism, for instance, the U. N. Balkan Commission did extremely useful work. It brought to the attention of the world the true facts of what has been happening along Greece's northern border. In that way it may have prevented the situation there from becoming worse. Yet as long as Russia has and chooses to exercise her veto the Security Council is helpless to prevent further violations and is incapable of punishing those responsible for them.

Mr. Hershel V. Johnson, United States deputy delegate on the Council, was only stating the literal truth when he denounced Gromyko's veto as a "simple abuse of power" and when he declared that this veto has confronted the Council with a "very grave situation."

The situation would be even more grave if the United States had not, last March, jumped into the breach in Greece and manifested its readiness to save that country's independence.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Successor To Bradley

WITHIN a few days Gen. Omar N. Bradley will leave his post as head of the Veterans' Administration. He is planning to sail for Europe on August 15 for a six-week tour of American occupation zones in Germany and Austria. If there is time, Bradley will visit the battlefields of Normandy where, just three years ago, he was leading the army of invasion in some of the bloodiest fighting of the war.

Childs

Not long after his return to this country, Bradley will replace his friend, General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, as Chief of Staff. Thus the career of this soft-spoken, almost shy soldier will come to a new climax.

What is now troubling President Truman's advisers is how to replace Bradley with a man of sufficient stature and courage to carry through the Bradley reforms in the Veterans' Administration. It is once again the familiar story of these postwar years—the search for a big man for a big job. Secretary of Defense James Forrestal summed it up at his first press conference since his appointment when he said his chief task was "to get people."

How serious this is for the Veterans' Administration can only be understood against the background of the pressures on that far-flung organization, with its more than 200,000 employes. Equally important is the extent of the reforms which Bradley, with his patience, his tenacity and his fighting spirit, has initiated.

WHEN HE became head of the VA two years ago, he found it was pretty much under the thumb of the professional veterans' lobby dominated by the American Legion. Outsiders who were powerful in the veterans' organizations gave the orders behind the scenes.

This had led to serious abuses. Men were kept in VA hospitals as pensioners even though they were not in need of medical care. In some cases, Bradley discovered, privileged veterans would establish themselves in VA hospitals in the South in the winter, and then, with the coming of hot weather, they would move to a VA hospital in cool New England. One result was that less-privileged veterans in need of hospitalization were kept on long waiting lists.

Even more serious was the fact that first-class doctors would have nothing to do with the VA. They found that their orders were overruled by politics.

Bradley has changed all that. Clashing openly with the veterans' lobby, he has abolished privilege. With the aid of his able assistant, Maj. Gen. Paul R. Hawley, chief medical director of VA, Bradley has persuaded leading physicians and the top medical schools to participate in the program of retraining and rehabilitation.

SUMMARIZING it this way makes it sound easy. It has not been easy. Every step has meant a fight. Other obstacles have stood in Bradley's path. Inflation has boosted the cost of building new hospitals by 50 per cent, so that the VA can build only about half of the additional hospitals so badly needed.

Bradley knows better than anyone else how quickly these reforms can be wiped out, since they are still so new. In two or three years, when the new system is well established, it can stand up against the assault of those who would go back to the old methods.

It is this that makes the choice of the new director critically important. It can make or break the new VA with its vast load of responsibility from World War II.

The candidate of the American Legion is generally understood to be Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, who was head of Selective Service during the war and is now winding up that operation. The present head of the Legion, Paul H. Griffith, was with Hershey in Selective Service.

While recognizing the efficiency of Hershey's wartime performance, President Truman is said to have passed over him in his search for a new director of VA. The President is anxious to find a man who will be free of any commitment or connection—a man concerned with the interests of all veterans.

The salary is $12,000. If his successor follows Bradley's routine, he will spend his days and many of his nights in conferences and meetings, making decisions on which the welfare of millions of men and women depend. In a following column, some of the problems Bradley has faced will be discussed.

Congress 'Saved' Taxpayers 6.6 Billions, Bridges Declares

Senate Appropriations Chairman Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) last night asserted the Republican Congress "saved" taxpayers $6,616,578,029, even though actual budget cuts fell short of the mark.

As "Battle of the Budget" figures continued to fly, Bridges figured Republican "savings" this way:

1. A cut of $2,805,712,735 from new appropriations requestedd by the President.

2. A $283,170,048 cut from deficiency appropriations requested by the White House.

3. Recapture of $3,527,695,246 from carry-over appropriations made in former years.

House Appropriations Chairman John Taber (R., N. Y.) who estimated on Saturday that Congress cut the budget around three billion and reduced over-all costs some five billion in expected to release his own final figures this weekend.

Neutral sources placed the cuts at around $2,750,000,000.

President Truman will tell his own story of what happened to his budget when he releases revised estimates in mid-August.

Democratic budgeteers, deducting contract authorizations and so-called "hidden" money items, insisted bonafide reductions were nearer one billion.

Bridges in his statement said the cutting "has only been started" and will be "pursued relentlessly" next session. He said the cuts were "remarkable" in the face of the troubled world situation and "the refusal of Administration officials to cooperate."

Said Bridges:

"The budget and accounting system of the Federal government is such that a number of differing statistical tables can be used to express the action of Congress on the spending program of the Government for the fiscal year 1948.

"The fact remains, however, that Congress—for the first time in 15 years—has taken a husky bite out of the government spending program, action which is more noteworthy as a Congressional achievement because it was done without the help of the Executive branch."

Bridges charged the last Democratic Congress increased spending $6,800,000,000 above the President's original estimates.

U. S. Plans to Tighten Exports Of Gold to Curb Speculation

The Treasury served notice yesterday it intends to tighten up on licenses for export of gold in a move to prevent sales abroad at prices above the United States rate of $35 an ounce.

This signaled full U. S. cooperation in a drive sparked by the 44-nation World Monetary Fund to break up international "black marketing" of gold lest it undermine the stability of exchange values of various currencies.

Proposed Amendments Outlined

The Treasury said it proposes to amend licensing regulations under the Gold Reserve Act of 1934 in two major respects:

1. To ban export of gold by private concerns in bar form even where the concerns say it will be used for industrial, professional, or artistic purposes. Licenses would be restricted to export of "semi-processed gold"—that is sheets, powder, wires, sentures, etc.—for these purposes.

2. To narrow the conditions for getting licenses to re-export gold refined in this country from gold ore imported from elsewhere.

These licenses would be restricted to cases where the refining is done on a consignment basis and where the refined golf is re-exported to the consignor or some one designated by him, and the shipment into other countries conforms to their regulations.

Hearing Set August 11

The Treasury said it will hold a public hearing here about August 11 before putting the proposed amendments into effect.

Britain, Canada and the Philippines already have taken action, in cooperation with the World Fund's request last month, to stop their nationals from engaging in international dealings in gold at premium prices.

In this country, action previously had been limited to a simple "request' 'by the Treasury and Federal Reserve Board to American banks, firms and individuals, to keep out of speculation in gold abroad and not let others use their "facilities and funds" for such speculation.

Truman Veto Hits at 'Tieup' Between Railroads and Banks

By The Associated Press

President Truman yesterday killed a bill governing financing of the Pullman (Sleeping Car) Co., declaring it would 'facilitate banker control of railroads."

The bill would have included sleeping car companies among carriers whose issuance of securities is subject to approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Mr. Truman found "no objection" to this provision.

But he said in a statement that the bill also would "sanction a departure from the long-established policy against interlocking directorates."

Mr. Truman said the "eradication" of banker control of railroads "is sufficiently difficult, without the enactment of new legislation, to facilitate the establishment of such control." He also noted that the issue of banker control is involved in an antitrust suit "now pending against the railroads."

Requested by ICC

The legislation was requested by the ICC after Federal courts approved a 1945 plan for sale of Pullman's capital stock. This followed a court order for Pullman to dispose of its sleeping car business or its car manufacturing business.

The President observed that the legislation would "provide an exception" to a provision in existing law which forbids an officer of a carrier from profiting from any dealings in the carrier's securities.

Under the vetoed bill, a man who was an officer of a railroad and also of another corporation could profit from dealings in the railroad's securities provided:

1. The deal was with the highest bidder under ICC regulations and

2. The profit was due to the officer's relationship to the second corporation and not to the carrier.

Calls Safeguard Temporary

It has been argued, Mr. Truman said, that the present restriction is unnecessary since railroad securities generally must, be marketed through competitive bids. But this bidding requirement is only the result of an ICC ruling and is subject to change at any time, he said.

He noted a contention that present law makes it "difficult or impossible for a railroad to award prospective security issues to banking or investment concerns with which some of its directors were connected."

But the President declared: "It was the express purpose of existing law to make it difficult or impossible for railroads to deal with banking or investment companies with interlocking directorates."

"Dealing in which both parties to the transaction are under common control should be avoided," he added.

D. C. Charities Get $268 From Wartime Group

Gifts totaling $268.77 to Washington charities were announced yesterday by the Hampshire Heights Civil Defense Committee, which liquidated its treasury.

Edmund J. Flynn of 225 Emerson st. nw., chairman of the wartime organization, announced that checks had been mailed as follows: Children's Hospital, $100; the Summer Outing Committee, $50; the Merrick Boys Camp, $50; camp funds of the District Girl Scouts and Boy Scouts, $25 each, and the American Can Society Fund, $18.77.

Bagpipes Allowed As 'War Instruments'

San Francisco, July 30 (AP).—The all-girl Highlander bagpipe band of the University of Iowa failed to appear at the Golden Gate Exposition in 1939 after James C. Petrillo, AFL Musicians Union head, ruled standby musicians would be required.

Today the 48-girl band is playing here for the Lions International Convention, with no professionals standing by.

Band Director William L. Adamson explained those are not musical instruments the girls are playing, that history books call them "instruments of war."

British Withdraw 700 Millions of Loan in Month

By the United Press

Hard-pressed Great Britain has drawn down an additional 300 million dollars of its American loan, leaving an even one billion dollars balance, the Treasury revealed yesterday.

Using up the $3,750,000,000 credit much faster than originally planned, the British have made four withdrawals totalling 700 million this month.

No official explanation of the heavy withdrawals in July has been advanced, but informed observers said the growing economic crisis in Britain obviously was the cause. British officials also have blamed the sharp and unexpected rise in prices of American goods since the low was negotiated last year.

At the time the loan was made, British leaders said they hoped it would tide their country over about three years of the post-war recovery period. However, nearly three-fourths of the loan has been used in the first year.

Australia Backs U. S. Plan for Early Jap Peace

Tokyo, July 30.—Herbert V. Evatt, Australia's Deputy Prime Minister, today indorsed the American plan for an early peace treaty with Japan, and said his country "is irrevocably opposed" to preliminary talks by the Big Four foreign ministers. He indicated Australia will "strongly resist" any effort to use the veto power in connection with the Japanese treaty.

Asked whether Australia would be ready to take part in a peace conference which did not include the Soviet Union, he expressed hope that all 11 nations on the Far Eastern Commission would be represented.

Evatt, speaking at the Tokyo Correspondents' Club, reiterated his statement that Australia's war effort entitles her to recognition as one of the principal parties to such a settlement.

4-Billion Profits Tax Drop Cuts U. S. Total; Incomes Up

Federal tax collections in fiscal 1947, which ended June 30, fell $1,563,711,000 below the previous fiscal year because of heavy loss of revenue from the repealed excess-profits tax, Treasury records showed yesterday.

However, the yield from income taxes reached new peaks.

The excess profits tax yield slowed to a comparative trickle of belated payments since last January. It was down by $4,256,310,000 for fiscal 1947, but increased collections from income and other taxes helped cushion the effect on Treasury receipts.

Total Receipts Listed

Total receipts of the Internal Revenue Bureau from all sources were listed as $39,108,385,000. (From surplus property sales, customs duties and some other sources, the Government got supplementary receipts that boosted its total budget income to $43,037,798,000.)

Income tax collections, both from individuals and corporations, were up sharply to record highs, reflecting booming business and employment.

Individual income tax receipts reached $19,343,297,000, topping fiscal 1946 by $638,761,000 although the tax rate was lowered January 1, 1946, midway in the earlier year.

Payments by veterans, largely exempt when they were in service, helped swell the returns.

Corporation income taxes totaled $6,035,095,000, an increase of $1,415,146,000 over the previous year, also despite a rate reduction.

Officials Not Impressed

Officials observed, however, that this was less impressive than appears at a glance. Excess-profits taxes really were additional levies on corporate incomes and the combined receipts from corporate income and excess-profits taxes were off sharply in fiscal 1947.

A decline in whisky sales was reflected in a $51,401,000 drop in revenue from alcoholic beverages, which totaled $2,474,763,000.

Receipts declined by $21,518,000 and $39,691,000 from imported and domestic spirits, respectively. Beer tax receipts were up.

Tobacco tax collections, totaling $1,237,768,000, were $72,249,000 higher than in the previous year.

Retailers' excise taxes, totaling $514,226,000, were up by $22,180,000. The tax on cosmetics dropped slightly. But there were gains in tax receipts from sales of jewelry and furs.

Taxpayers Rush To Meet Deadline

Yesterday's "constant stream" of persons filing personal property tax returns at District Building is expected to get "even larger" today, tax officials said last night. Volume of mailed-in returns also is "stepping up" every day. James L. Martin, chief of the personal property tax division, reported. Persons must either file returns or send them in by mail prior to midnight tonight to escape a 20 per cent penalty, Martin warned.

Senators to Help Plan For Cuban Anniversary

Senate President Vandenberg (R., Mich.) yesterday named four members of a joint committee to help plan an observance of the fiftieth anniversary of th liberation of Cuba from Spanish rule. The celebration will be held during the summer of 1948.

Vandenberg named Senators Martin (R., Pa.), Connally (D., Tex.) and Green (D., R. I.), the Senate's only Spanish-American War veterans, and Senator Brooks (R., Ill.), a World War I veteran.

8 Tokyo B-29s Set For Flight to D. C.

Tokyo, July 30 (AP).—Crews of eight Superfortresses made final preparations today for a 7000-mile one-stop flight to Washington, which they hope to make in less than 32 hours.

B-29s of the Eighth Air Force—the atomic bombing force—will take off from Tokyo tomorrow and will fly the Great Circle route with a stopover at Anchorage, Alaska. The hop to Washington, where they are due at noon Friday, is planned as one of the main events of the Air Force's fortieth anniversary celebration on that day.

289 Apartment House Units Get 5 to 8% Rent Increase

Rent boosts for units of two large District apartment houses were granted yesterday by the Office of the District Rent Control Administrator.

Hikes averaged eight per cent for 203 units at Cavalier Apartments, 3500 14th st. nw.; 5 per cent for 86 units at 1314 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Owners of the Cavalier sought increases amounting to 14.22 per cent, or a total of $25,700 per year, to cover higher operating costs, taxes and capital improvements. Examiner Robert T. Smith, who heard the case, recommended a $12,000 annual increase.

Increases were denied in several cases, Smith said, where previous boosts at the Cavalier covered the higher costs or where the new rents would be higher than those at comparable apartments.

Rents at the Cavalier range from $33.33 to $120 per month.

Owners of the apartment house at 1314 Massachusetts ave. nw. asked 16 to 17½ per cent hikes to meet added costs and taxes, but received only a 5 per cent raise.

At a hearing before Examiner James G. Tyson, tenants agreed some boost was needed, but said the rent rates requested by the owners were too high.

'Voodoo Bishop' Cures One Ill, But Gets Blame for Another

A Washington "voodoo bishop" recently used his "magical" powers to stop a neighborhood squabble, the United States Attorney's office was told yesterday.

But the "bishop" who operates along New Jersey ave. nw., isn't doing so well in his attempts to cure stiff knees.

This information was disclosed yesterday after a 65-year-old man hobbled into Municipal Court. He carried with him a snake cane, and he furtively glanced over his shoulder.

"I want a warrant," he shouted. "I want a warrant to stop the bishop from voodooing me."

Behind him stood a paunchy little man, with chin whiskers. He was dressed solemnly in black. He said:

"Peace be with you. I am the bishop."

J. Warren Wilson, an Assistant United States Attorney, asked what the matter was, and this is the story the man with the cane told:

"I went to the bishop about six months ago to get a voodoo powder to stop my neighbor from fighting me. The bishop took me into his back room where it was dark. He made a lot of funny noises, and gave me this powder."

Wilson looked at it and smelled it.

"It looks and smells like raspberry gelatin to me," he said.

"No," said the little man with the cane. "It's voodoo powder. The bishop told me to put a pinch of it in my shoe every night. Not too much, he said, because then my neighbor would love me so much, I couldn't get rid of him."

"Peace be with you. I am the bishop," said whiskers.

The man with the cane pulled up his trousers leg and demonstrated his knee, swollen to double its normal size.

"That's what that voodoo powder did to me. The bishop took $10 for that and then he made me pay him $20 more to treat my knee for what the voodoo powder did," said the man gesturing with his cane.

"But my knee got worse and I want a warrant to stop him from voodooing me," he added.

The bishop stroked his wiskers and said in sonorous tones.

"And how are you getting along with your neighbor?"

"We're getting along fine, but look what happened to my knee."

Wilson promised to look into the case to see if there were any law on voodoo medicine.

"Peace be with you. I am the bishop," said wiskers as he left.

SCC Again Bar Edwards' Plea On Rate Cases

Richmond, Va., July 30 (AP).—The State Corporation Commission today rejected a renewed request of Mayor Horace H. Edwards to allow governments of localities served by the Virginia Electric & Power Co. to be represented in rate negotiations between the company and the SCC.

In a reply to Edwards' letter in which the Richmond Mayor said he was "reluctant" to accept as final the SCC's refusal to grant his request, the commission said it is "the agency established by law to safeguard the interests of the public in rate negotiations."

It invited Edwards "or any other member of the public" possessing information or data believed to be helpful and informative to the commission in the performance of it sduty to submit "the same in writing at such time or times as the offerer desires to file it."

The letter was signed by the three members of the commission, Chairman H. Lester Hooker, L. McCarthy Downs and Harvey B. Apperson.

In his letter addressed to Hooker, Edwards declared that Vepco earnings in 1946 were 53 per cent higher than those "generally permitted electric producers." Edwards declared "if governmental representatives of the consumer had been allowed to participate in negotiations last year, I feel certain they could have saved the electric customers of Virginia Electric & Power Co. more than three million dollars . . ."

The Mayor suggested representation at rate conferences be permitted through a utility committee of the League of Virginia Municipalities. Such a committee was set up and will hold its first meeting tomorrow.

Selassie's Son-in-Law Sentenced to Death

Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, July 30 (AP).—Ras Haile Selassie Gugsa, son-in-law of Emperor Haile Selassie, was sentenced today to death for high treason in connection with collaboration with the Italians during World War II. He was expected to appeal.

The chieftain joined the Italian invaders of Ethiopia before the war.

Kingsley Puts Rail in Black In First Month

By S. Oliver Goodman

Joseph T. Kingsley of Washington steered the Norfolk Southern Railway Co. out of the red in the first full month of operation under his management.

Kingsley

The road yesterday reported net income of $54,914, for June, erasing a net deficit of $46,961 for the first five months this year. Kingsley was elected president in May.

Norfolk Southern winds from Norfolk to Charlotte, N. C., and connects with a number of major North-South trunk lines. Latest balance sheet shows assets exceeding 21 million dollars.

President Kingsley was Washington traffic representative for the Soo Line, Seaboard Air Line and seven short line railroads. Born in Baltimore, he has lived in Washington for 35 years. He served in the first World War as a major in the transportation division.

Since Kingsley assumed active management, Norfolk Southern has purchased five new diesel switching locomotives, arranged to acquire 10 new diesel freight engines, placed orders for 250 new box cars and is in the midst of rearranging track and yard facilities and improving the roadbed.

New York Cotton

New York, July 30 (AP).—Cotton futures were irregular today, with final prices 35 cents a bale lower to 30 cents higher. Good crop news, reports of a heavy movement of cotton developing in Texas, and the uncertain European economic situation were factors.

Liquidation and light hedging at one time depressed the market as much as $1.83 a bale under the previous close. Mill demand, in part representing month-end covering against textile sales, provided some support, along with short covering.

MINDING YOUR BUSINESS

Baseball, Tips and Stalin

MAYBE baseball is the national pastime. But the turnstiles don't show it. Customers, including those who go to Three-Eye league games, pay about 22 million dollars a year to watch professional pitching and batting. College football takes in twice as much, billiard and bowling alleys four times. As for the movies, there you run into big amusement money—better than a billion per year.

Livingston

And don't let anybody tell you that women are all vanity. True, they shell out 541 million dollars a year to beauty parlors for hair waves, facials, eyebrow plucking, and henna rinses. But you and I, mister, pay barber shops 468 million dollars for haircuts, manicures, etc. What's more, we've been longer at it. In 1929, we paid out 350 million dollars—so the increase over the years has been a third. Beauty parlor income has tripled since then. Implication: Women's beauty is a much more rapidly expanding industry than men's.

All those facts you can learn from the national income study of the Department of Commerce, just released. Here is a statistical treasure trove which lays bare the workings of our economy: Who buys what, from whom, and for how much. It was five years in the making—under the painstaking, perspicacious direction of Milton Gilbert, head of the department's national income division. It is Homeric in conception and a Herculean accomplishment, out of which will arise a new understanding of America. No nation in the world possesses such a statistical summary of itself at work and play.

MANY OF our notions—based upon hunch statistics—will go by the wayside. For instance: The theory that the 1929 crash was the result of oversaving and underconsumption, that people weren't spending their money, that not enough was going into the income stream; that, therefore, mass purchasing power was lacking to buy the goods and services produced. That was the theory. But now we have some facts about it. Personal savings in 1929 came to $3,700,000,000, or only about 4½ per cent of the personal income receipts. That hardly seems a big enough withholding to cause a major depression.

Another economic notion that calls for reexamination is this: That during the war big business got bigger and bigger—permanently. Back in 1929, corporations generated 58 per cent of the total business income; in 1944 the amount rose to 65 per cent. Now corporations are back to where they were in 1929. However, the share of proprietors and partners has shot up from 30 per cent in 1929 to 35 per cent today. People had more money to spend and paid their bills more promptly. So doctors, dentists and other professional entrepreneurs fared well, and, of course, the farmer thrived, and thrived, and thrived.

The study runs from 1929 through 1946—with some 1946 detail still not available. Too bad that 1929 had to be the start-off date. It was a boom year which ended up sour. Undoubtedly, 1926-28 would be a better point of predepression, prewar reference. But economic data prior to 1929 were sketchy. The United States was not statistics-conscious during the early '20s. Perhaps later on, Gilbert and his confreres will be able to piece together—out of statistical scraps here and there and out of their own knowledge of the economy, knowledge which could only have been gleaned from such a massive work as this—the statistics of those earlier years.

CERTAIN TRENDS can be quickly discerned from the figures. You'll note that food and tobacco expenditures have climbed to 55 billions, as against 21 billions in 1929 and 13 billions in 1933; you'll note also that they constitute 38 per cent of total expenditures, as against 27 per cent in '29 and 26 per cent in '32. That high proportion won't last. Indeed, it's already evident that people are spending more on automobiles, refrigerators, and other hard goods now that they are available. Maybe cash outlays on food and tobacco won't drop much; but the proportion will decline. As for rent, it's only 9 per cent of consumer outlays, as against 14.5 per cent in 1929 and 13.3 per cent in '35. As controls are eliminated, expenditures on rent will rise closer to prewar proportions.

Incidentally, if you like statistical facts and oddities, here are a few. Tipping in the United States totes up to big money; bellboys, beauty parlor operators, porters, waiters, barbers, and so on, pocket 400 million dollars annually in these lush times. Tobacco expenditures are just double what they were in 1929—$3,400,000,000 versus $1,700,000,000. Medical doctors take in $1,300,000,000 a year; dentists 650 million dollars; osteopaths 81 million dollars; chiropractors 52 million dollars. Osteopathic take-home has doubled since '29; but chiropractor fees are just the same.

So there you have it: required reading for economists, statisticians, market analysts, research directors of corporations, sales managers. No student of economics will be able to get away from it—for it will form the basis of economic analysis for years to come. New theories will develop from it. And it will stimulate new techniques in studying American affairs.

Yes, even Mr. Stalin will learn from it. In its 54 pages he can descry the immensity of the U. S. A., the variety of its resources, and the multifariousness of its satisfactions—from shoe shines to hunting and fishing, from china and glassware purchases to the hiring of masseurs.

New Yorkers' Use Of 'California' Label Is Upheld

New York, July 30 (AP).—The Second U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed today Federal District Judge Vincent L. Leibell's dismissal of a suit instituted by the California Apparel Creators and a group of 75 California apparel manufacturers against several New York apparel manufacturers for alleged unfair competition in using the word "California" or "Californian" as a trade mark or label.

The Appeals Court vote was two to one.

Among the New York defendants were Weider of California, Inc.; California Sportswear, Inc.; and Cortley Shirt Company, Inc.

The majority opinion by Judges Thomas W. Swan and Charles Clark held that the California manufacturers could not prevent manufacturers and dealers in New York from using the designations.

Mint Turns Out More Coins, But Value Is Less

The United States Mint turned out more coins during the fiscal year ended June 30 than in the preceding 12 months—but the value was less.

Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, mint director, reported 2,016,435,295 coins valued at $77,066,507.50 were prdouced compared with 1,658,127,100 coins valued at $76,003,170 the preceding year.

There were increases in coinage of pennies and dimes, but fewer nickels, quarters nad half dollars. The half dollars coined included the Iowa centennial and Booker T. Washington commemorative coins.

Mrs. Ross said the mint still is behind on production of military decorations awarded during the war by the Army, Navy, Coast Guard and Marines but is catching up.

Besides this work for the United States, 333,964,363 coins were minted for nine foreign governments—The Netherlands East Indies, Saudi Arabia, Colombia, Cuba, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Ethiopia, Panama and Venezuela.

D. C. Gas Net Drops Despite Gain in Sales

Despite increased sales, Washington Gas Light Co. yesterday reported a decline in net income for the first six months this year.

The company's net for the first half was $847,588, compared with $998,613 for the same 1946 period. The decline of $151,025 was attributed to substantially higher payrolls and increases in other operating costs.

Operating revenues of $7,617,197 were $429,514 higher than in the first six months of 1946. However, operating expenses and taxes total $6,400,470 against $5,903,625 last year.

The firm reported that June operations resulted in a net loss of $81,237, compared with a net profit of $5262 in the same 1946 month. June gas sales of 7,733,346 therms, compared with 7,371,744 in June, 1946, or an increase of 5 per cent.

Meters in service in the District of Columbia at the end of June numbered 168,936, compared with 166,922 at the same time last year.

One on the Aisle—

Life With Gilbert

Never a Regret, Relates Leatrice

By Richard L. Coe

YOU DON'T HAVE to have gray hairs to remember the days when John Gilbert was the great lover of the screen . . . Had he lived, Gilbert would be on the verge of becoming a grandfather . . . Leatrice Joy, who is the mother of Gilbert's daughter and for whom she was named, phones from Olney, where she's playing in "The Vinegar Tree," to daughter Leatrice in Rhode Island every night . . . The Gilbert grandchild's arrival is so close that Miss Joy isn't sure she'll get to Providence in time for the event after closing at Olney Sunday midnight . . . Now in her attractive mid-forties, the star of so many Cecil B. DeMille silent films looks back on her life with the tempestuous Jack with zestful pleasure and no regrets . . . "I always felt like a mother to him," reminisces Leatrice, "and I used to tell him that there always would be a light in the window for him whenever he was in trouble. And in his bookplates he drew in my little study lamp." . . . "The Vinegar Tree" is her first stage role in 14 years . . . Lately she's been living on a houseboat as plain Mrs. Westermark of Balboa, Calif. . . . She keeps her trim figure by incessant golfing, which is also the way the grandfather of the local critics keeps his boyish lines.

OLNEY'S current comedy gives the company its first chance to dress up for drawing room comedy and very fine they look, too . . . Nancy Holland, who too often has to bury her youth as maiden aunts and graying ladies, is as smart as an ad model in this one . . . The Paul Osborn comedy also gives scene designer Randall Brooks a chance to shine and shine he does, with a good-looking living room handsomely furnished . . . And no note on "The Vinegar Tree" would be complete without mentioning Rudulph Watson's name as the visiting artist who disrupts Jabez Gray's household . . . Rudy is an old Washington standby, a leading man of two of our defunct theaters—the wintertime Civic and the summertime Roadside . . . Rudy acted the same role with Miss Joy when they did the play in Great Neck a few weeks back and a suave, able performance he turns in.

ASIDE: It seems to us that it might be an appreciated move if the curtain-time dinners of some of the New York restaurants were extended to our country playhouse's neighboring Olney Inn . . . Part of the fun in cow-country theater-going is in dining out and the mass of patrons at the Inn on play nights indicates the restaurant is benefiting a lot from the theater . . . So how about a little cooperation in speeding folks along to make the first act? . . . Or is the restaurant business too good to give a dern?

CHIGGER-BELT is the name our Ted Tiller gives what Tallulah Bankhead has called the Citronella Circuit . . . Ted's directing this summer up at Cragsmoor, N. Y., and has just signed up another Washingtonian for a "first time anywhere" . . . The O. W. is Eugene Lerner, former "Dead End" kid, G. W. Phi Beta Kappa and senatorial secretary, who's written a comedy with a Washington political background . . . Scheduled for the week of August 12, the play is "Does the Lady Yield?" and centers around a society woman's adventures in politics . . . Tiller's direction at Cragsmoor recently got exceptional notice from Drama Critic Vernon Rice of the New York Post.

RUSSIA'S DISNEY is what you might call Alexander Ptushko, whose "Stone Flower" opens Saturday at the Hippodrome . . . You first came across Ptushko's work in "The New Gulliver," that puppet film of some years back . . . After that one he combined puppets, drawings and people in "The Golden Key" . . . Which recalls Disney's gradual introduction of real people into his films . . . In "Stone Flower" he has his first feature-length film with a cast of real people . . . The film, in color, is a fairy story based on Russian folk legends.

TODAY'S OPENINGS: Hedy Lamarr and Dennis O'Keefe move into the Earle in Miss Kitty Cornell's old stage vehicle, "Dishonored Lady"; Ray Milland and Teresa Wright take over the Capitol screen in "The Trouble With Women," and "Brute Force" hammers away into its second week at Keith's.

'Anniversary Song'

"Anniversary Song," the surprise hit from Columbia's "The Jolson Story," looms as the hottest number of the year. The song has zoomed to No. 2 on the Hit Parade, is No. 1 in sheet music sales in this country, No. 1 in sheet music sales in England, and the Jolson recording is the third best-selling record. Lyrics were written by Al Jolson and Saul Chaplin.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

More to Plane Probe Than Hollywood Girls

By Drew Pearson

The "Hollywood Beauty" probe of Howard Hughes' airplane lobbying presents some interesting contrasts. Behind this battle of Senate witnesses is a lot more than meets the eye.

Krug

At the head of the witness table is hard-hitting GOP Senator Brewster of Maine—tough, shrewd, an old hand at Senate investigations—who not only preaches but practices prohibition. In fact, Brewster doesn't even smoke.

At the target end of the investigation, and high up in the Truman Administration, is Secretary of the Interior Julius (Cap) Krug, with a long record as an efficient public servant, young, lusty, not a teetotaller, and politically naive. Cap is something of a small town boy first seeing the bright lights of Hollywood and Broadway.

And, though it looks as if Krug is the chief goat in this investigation, actually the shooting originally was aimed in another direction. Cap just happened to be in the path of the bullets.

The real shooting involves: (1) the old game of Democratic-Republican meat-axing; and (2) a desperate struggle between two great airlines for the most lucrative travel routes in the world.

The two airlines are: (1) Trans World Airlines, owned by Howard Hughes, which is battling for world routes with (2) Pan American Airways. Pan American Airways in turn long has had as its chief congressional spokesman, Senator Brewster, the man now turning the heat on Howard Hughes' Airplane contracts.

GOP Backs Pan American

Actually, the battle goes back a good many years, and if the Senate would ever consent to opening the State Department's confidential records back in the Hoover Administration, a story more important, though perhaps less sexy, would be uncovered.

Pan American Airways started some 20 years ago with the blessing of the biggest bigwigs of the Republican Party—the Mellon family, Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, and Walter Brown, then chairman of the Republican National Committee and campaign manager for Herbert Hoover.

On the other hand, Trans World Airlines and Howard Hughes have always played the Democratic side of the political street. Their friends were Elliott Roosevelt, Gov. Mon Wallgren of Washington, and, more recently, Cap Krug.

The issue at stake in this political jockeying has been airmail contracts and air routes. And since Pan American Airways got into the game early, it has always favored the principle of monopoly.

If the inside story of Pan American lobbying were told it would reveal the placing of certain former State Department officials on its payroll, an almost daily present of orchids to the secretary of one high State Department official, and amazing pressure brought upon Latin-American governments by the State Department.

Secret Instruction

In fact, one of the most unusual letters in the State Department's confidential files was written by Hoover's Postmaster General, Walter Brown, to Secretary of State Stimson in 1929, asking that "all practical assistance be given to the Pan American-Grace Airways in securing operating arrangements in preference to any other American company."

Secretary Stimson carried out the Postmaster General's command.

So far as is known, such an instruction has never been issued either before or since in the history of the State Department. All American consuls and envoys are paid by all the people of the United States and are given instructions not to favor any one American company as against another.

Despite this time-honored policy, instructions went to United States Ambassadors and diplomats in Latin America to favor Pan American Airways as against its chief competitors, the Curtiss Aeroplane and Motor Co., and the New York, Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires Airline.

As a result, 52 representations were made by the State Department to Latin American governments on behalf of Pan Am, in at least six of which the department acted to head off competing American airlines. In one case, the State Department's note to Guatemala on behalf of Pan Am was so brazen that the entire Guatemalan Cabinet resigned in protest.

Even Marines Protest

In Haiti, the contract negotiated by Pan Am was so high-handed that Gen. John A. Russell, in command of United States Marines, protested against the State Department's efforts and branded the Pan Am contract "a monopoly of the most objectionable character."

However, Postmaster General Brown, the campaign manager who elected Herbert Hoover, had spoken. Also, the Mellon family money was involved. So the State Department continued to crack the whip.

In Nicaragua, the United States Marine commander, Gen. Logan Feland, also protested against Pan Am's high-handedness, while the Honduran Congress passed a unanimous resolution criticizing the President of Honduras for bowing to the State Department's pressure to give Pan American Airways a monopoly.

Thus, Pan American Airways, with strong GOP backing, concluded the nicest, tightest monopoly in the history of American aviation—in every country south of Mexico.

And, true to this monopolistic policy, Pan American has done its best to persuade other airlines, notably Howard Hughes and his Trans World Airlines, to cooperate with them in a "community company" by which one American line would be selected by the United States Government to operate a monopoly in certain countries. Under such a plan, Pan American, being first in the field, undoubtedly would receive a monopoly in lucrative Latin America, plus other areas.

In advocating this plan, Pan American has had the 100 per cent support of Senator Brewster. Undying in his devotion to Pan Am, and prodded occasionallys by Pan Am Vice President Sam Pryor, Republican National Committeeman from Connecticut, Brewster has spent several years trying to put Pan Am's ideas across on the Senate floor. So far he has not had the support of a majority of his colleagues.

How much Brewster's fondness for Pan Am had to do with the current investigation of Howard Hughes is not known. Brewster himself says there is no connection. In any event, the facts now being unearthed should be brought out and made known to the public; though it would be healthier for the public if the other side were brought out also.

Giants Halt Blackwell's String at 16, 5-4; Stymie Becomes First $700,000 Winner

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

THE BRITISH, in a move to restore their battered boxing prestige, are now attempting to dig up a good fighter from the nation's coal pits. The Associated Press reports that the National Coal Board, in an alliance with London Fight Promoter Jack Solomons, will hold an elimination tournament among the country's 720,000 miners.

POVICH

It won't work, chums, is the advice from this side of the sea. The coal mines aren't the place to look for boxing champions, in the experience of the United States. The British may be deluded by the fact that their best fighter in recent years, Tommy Farr, came out of the mines as did Joe Baksi, the American who knocked out their man, Bruce Woodcock. But Farr won no title, and in the United States Baksi is being ridiculed as an opponent for Joe Louis.

The coal mines of America are not noted for the fighters they produced. The United States found its champions against the backdrop of varied other occupations, but not the mines. Baseball, yes. The mines yielded many a good ballplayer like Steve O'Neill, the Coveleskies, Bucky Harris, Hughey Jennings, Mike Ryba and Mickey Haefner.

JOE LOUIS GRADUATED from the cotton fields of Alabama and a job as sweeper at the Ford plant in Detroit to become the greatest fighting man in modern history. Gus Lesnevich, the light-heavyweight champ, came off a truck, and Willie Ritchie, the old lightweight champion, worked as the driver of a horse-drawn sand wagon before he discovered he could fight.

Out of the ranks of the cowpunchers came the best fighting man of his day, Stanley Ketchell, and the earlier years of the century saw another fighting cowboy in Luther McCarthy whose career was cut tragically short. McCarthy, then managed by Billy McCarney, was supposedly on his way to the heavyweight title when he was electrocuted during a bout with Arthur Pelky in Canada in an open air arena. Defective wiring of the ring on that rainy day was blamed.

Jess Willard was a legitimate cowhand, too, before he was hailed as the White Hope who could lick Jack Johnson and restore the unnecessary Nordic supremacy of the prize ring that was a passion of that day. Jack Dempsey? To find his exact counterpart, the British might well comb their hobo jungles and rod-riders.

THE BRITISH MIGHT survey their dead-end kids for their version of Rocky Graziano, who came up from the streets. Tony Zale graduated from the steel puddling mills of Gary, Ind., to the middleweight title, and Jim Crabbe, who claimed the middle title after Ketchell's death, was a steel worker in Hammond, Ind.

Jack Johnson was a stevedore in Galveston, Tex., before he blossomed as the slickest heavyweight of his day. Jimmy McLarnin found gainful employment as a fisherman off the Vancouver shores before he chucked it to win the lightweight title. Barney Ross came out of his father's Chicago delicatessen store to the lightweight crown, and if the British are asking where Beau Jack came from the answer is easy. He was a bootblack at an Augusta, Ga., country club.

Perhaps the next good British fighter is shucking oysters behind somebody's public raw bar. That was Joe Gans' trade on the Baltimore waterfront before he stepped into prize fighting to gain repute as perhaps the cleverest boxer of all time. Freddie Miller and Harry Jeffra, two of the better American featherweights, were golf caddies before they were interested in the prize ring.

SIX OF AMERICA'S champions came out of the Navy and Marines. Johnny Buff, off the U. S. S. Rhode Island, didn't have a glove on until he was 29, yet won the world bantamweight title from Pete Herman. Jack Sharkey was the big shot of fleet fighters before he became world heavy champ. Eddie (Babe) Risko, fresh out of service, won the middleweight title, as did Ken Overlin.

A Marine corporal named George Leblanche jumped ship in Frisco in 1886 and knocked out the old Jack Dempsey in 32 rounds for the light-heavy title. Gene Tunney, who defeated another Dempsey for the heavyweight title in 1926, never fought much before he was in the Marines. Max Baer used to axe cattle in a Livermore, Calif., slaughterhouse.

Willie Meehan, who was good enough to fight Jack Dempsey for the title, tried a stage career first. On the stage of a San Francisco theater in 1910, he was hooted and egged off during a rendition of "Mother Machree" on amateur night. The same night in a San Francisco fight club, Al Jolson, who wanted to be a boxer, was knocked out in one round. Apparently they were both miscast. Meehan quit singing to fight, and Jolson quit fighting to sing, and both did very well in later years.

Jacobs' Star Last for 3-4 Of Race in $50,000 'Cap

Boston, July 30 (AP).—Stymie, the fabulous stretch-running six-year-old, became the first horse to top $700,000 in winnings and boosted the turf's all-time earnings record to $719,660 for Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs today after ovtaking William Helis' Elpis at the eighth pole and winning the $50,000 Massachusetts Handicap by a length and a half before a 28,048 crowd at Suffolk Downs.

After Stymie closed as the 1-5 favorite, Conn McCreary got him away last in the seven-horse field and kept him there for the first three-quarters. Then, without undue effort, they moved up to third coming into the home stretch and were going away when they finished the mile and a furlong in 1:50 flat.

Blue Yonder Third

Mrs. E. H. Augustus' Blue Yonder showed, a neck behind Elpis and two lengths in front of the Brookemeade stable's Boss. The others, in their order of finish, were D. F. Harrington's Weathercock, J. L. McKnight's sprinter Agrarian-U, which set the pace during the first half-mile, and L. J. Lepper's Off-Islander.

The sweltering spectators, who wagered a $1,509,910 total during the eight-race card, dumped $246,281 on Stymie, including $139,468 in the show pool. As a result, the racing association had to make up a $25,886 deficit to make $2.20 show payments of Stymie, Elpis and Blue Yonder.

Stymie's win and place price's were $2.60 and $2.20 and Elpis, a 5-year-old mare that has won the Hannah Dustin Handicap here three years running, paid a $3.20 place price.

Win Worth $41,150

Stymie, a $1500 claim as a juvenile, has made 107 starts and won 29 of them. He also has finished out of the money 29 times.

Today's decisive triumph was worth $41,150 and it gave Stymie a $96,290 margin on the mighty Assault, the second best money-maker in turf history, who lost the top-place a week ago Saturday when he bowed to Stymie and Natchez in the $100,000 Gold Cup race at Belmont Park.

Seixas Upsets Mulloy at Net

Southampton, N. J., July 30.—Vic Seixas, of Philadelphia, scored a stunning upset in the third round of the Southampton Invitation Tennis Tournament today by defeating top-seeded Gardnar Mulloy of Coral Gables, Fla., in straight sets, 8—6, 6—3.

Young Seixas, who starred on the North Carolina University tennis team this year, played a punishing offensive game against the favorite and defending champion. The Philadelphian rushed the nets continuously to score brilliant volleys and passing shots against his tiring opponent.

Del., second-seeded and last year's runner-up to Mulloy, advanced easily into the quarter finals by trouncing the veteran Sidney Wood 6—2, 6—1. Bob Falkenburg of Hollywood, Calif., used his tremendous service to overcome a first-set loss to triumph over Jack Tuero of New Orleans, 6—8, 6—3, 6—1.

In other third-round matches, Sam Match of San Francisco and Ed Moylan joined the quarter finalists.

Match eliminated Fred Kovaleski of Hamtramck, Mich., and young Moylan, still slightly hampered by grass courts, outlasted Earl Cochell of Forest Hills, 6—3, 8—6.

No Tennis Class Saturday; Films Listed Next Week

Attention, tennis students! No school this Saturday, but free tennis movies next Thursday, August 7, at 7:30 p. m.

If you're enrolled in The Washington Post Tennis School, conducted by the District Recreation Department on Saturday mornings at 17 tennis court areas, you're invited to this series of films starring Don Budge, in the Department of Interior Auditorium, 18th and C Sts. N. W.

Films from the U. S. Lawn Tennis Association include shots from U. S. National Championships and Davis Cup tournaments, together with slow motion of Budge illustrating the proper racket grips for forehand and backhand drives and volleys, service, stance, rhythm, timing, smashes, footwork—just about every phase of the game.

Hursey Boxes With Robinson

Smuggy Hursey, 19-year-old local middleweight who boxes Danny Kapilow in a 10-round return boxing bout at Griffith Stadium Monday, August 11, will work out with Roy Robinson, world welterweight champion, at Billy Grubb's Harlem gynasium today and tomorrow.

Hursey has restricted himself to calisthenics in New York drills to date, but boxes with Robinson today. He again plans making use of the celebrated iron mask formerly used by Henry Armstrong while preparing for the Kapilow bout.

Berra Grand Slams Yanks To 8-to-5 Win

New York, July 30 (AP).—Yogi Berra and Fireman Joe Page teamed up on Detroit today to give the New York Yankees a second straight win over the Tigers, 8-5.

Berra's grand slam homer in the third gave the home club an early lead and Page came in to protect it when Allie Reynolds wilted in the fourth.

The weak-hitting Tigers were off to a running start when Dick Wakefield banged his seventh homer, a 450-foot drive into the Yankee bull pen in right field, in the first inning. Two more came home in the second on two walks and Dizzy Trout's double to deep center.

Berra then took matters in hand in the Yankee third. Successive singles by Phil Rizzuto, Reynolds and George Stirnweiss produced one score. Tommy Henrich walked and Berra sent Trout to a cool shower by blasting his tenth homer into the right field bullpen clearing the sacks.

Whitacre Coach At Martinsburg

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 30.—George Whitacre, head coach at Arren County High School, Front Royal, Va., last year, has been named assistant coach at Martinsburg High, G. William Ropp, superintendent of schools, announced yesterday. Whitacres is a resident of Bunker Hill, this county.

Russell Williamson, assistant last year, also will help, giving Head Coach John Cobourne two football assistants.

Cobb Brings Same Car For Utah Speed Tests

New York, July 30 (AP).—John Cobb, the English speed racer who hung up a world auto record of 369.7 miles per hour nearly eight years ago, arrived today aboard the Queen Elizabeth with his giant black and silver car for another shot at the Bonneville salt flats in Utah.

It was in the same $100,000 2600-horsepower job that Cobb established his speed mark on August 24, 1939, on the salt flats.

Herbie Isn't Going High Hat; He'll Stick With Old Crowd

By Bus Ham
Post Reporter

FIVE-FOOT-FIVE Herbie (Biff) Jones isn't the type of kid that is likely to go high hat—not even if he one day becomes the world's lightweight champion.

Herbie is an orphan. Almost as far back as he can remember, he has been fighting for his very existence, and he isn't going to forget the friends who have stood by him.

In that respect, the little guy with the lusty left is quite a sentimentalist, and he lets you know that proudly.

"You see," he said, "fighters aren't really tough guys. Not deep down inside.

"I haven't forgotten when I used to cry my way out of fights when I was a little kid. I was afraid to fight.

"About the only one who took a personal interest in me in those days was my grandfather, William Reece Jones, who lives at Woodlawn, Pa.

"I was still that way when the public welfare people sent me to a Maryland farm when I was in my early teens.

"It was there that I learned that a fellow has to fight his way through life.

"THE son of the man who ran that farm was big and tall, about 25 years old. He used to shove me around a lot.

"But the hard work I was doing began putting some muscles on me and one day I forgot about being afraid and gave that big guy a whipping."

On that Maryland farm with Herbie was Frank Sweeney, who also was to grow up into a current favorite in Washington fighting circles.

It was Sweeney who first taught Herbie the ways of the ring. Later they both came to Washington and their feeling toward each other is like that of two brothers.

Herbie found a home at the Merrick Boys Club.

"That's still for me, that Merrick club," Herbie said, and you understand just how he feels. "I go over there all the time to help teach the kids to box."

WHAT probably is the most important fight of this Jones boy's career comes up Monday night at Griffith Stadium when he meets Johnny (Honeyboy) Bratton, highly rated colored boy from Chicago.

"I'll fight better against Bratton than ever before," he said confidently. "I always am better against tougher fighters.

"That's the way it goes in this fight game. When I was an amateur, I lost five of my first six bouts. Amateurs are wild, reckless swingers. You don't have time to figure out your opponent's style.

"In pro boxing, you can dope the other guy out in two or three rounds, if you're in there thinking."

If Herbie whips Bratton, he will be in line for bigger things.

"But that won't turn my head," he said. "What I want most the rest of my life is to keep the friends I've made the last few years.

"I'm no Rocky Graziano, but 3d st. se., playing pool with the old gang. None of that big-shot stuff for me."

Navy Gridders Shift Training To Northwest

Annapolis, Md., July 30 (AP).—Rear Adm. James L. Holloway, jr., Naval Academy superintendent, announced today the Navy football squad would hold preseason training at Whidbey Island Naval Air Station, about 60 miles north of Seattle.

The West Coast training site was chosen for its more congenial weather and because the Navy's first game this year will be with the University of California at Berkeley, September 27.

It is expected Coach Tom Hamilton will have some 60 Midshipmen report August 31.

There was no secret of the fact that the footballers had some toughening up this summer during their recreational periods while on cruise. The training period will last about three weeks.

Navy officials have been eager for some time to get the service football squad out over more distant areas to stimulate interest in the Navy.

Hey Kids! Here's Instruction On Attending Nats Game

FINAL plans have been made made for the 7500 Walter Johnson Baseball School students to attend the Washington-Chicago baseball game Saturday at Griffith Stadium as guests of Clark Griffith.

The boys are to meet at the various recreation centers in Washington and the counties prior to the game.

Here is where they meet:

Boys who attended classes in the District will go to the playground where they received instructions and will leave for the game from there. The exception is that the lads who attended the classes at Central will gather at Powell. Be at your playground at 1:30 p. m.

Each Arlington, Alexandria, Montgomery and Fairfax County boy must report to the respective playground where instruction was given him at 12:30 p. m.

Prince Georges County youngsters will gather at the following playgrounds at 1 p. m.: Greenbelt boys at Greenbelt School, Hyattsville kids at Magruder Park, Seat Pleasant boys at Maryland Park High School, Fairmount Heights boys at Fairmount Heights School, Marlboro boys at Marlboro High School.

Every boy who attended the classes may attend. Do not bring your diplomas with you, however. Your recreation department instructor knows who is eligible.

Diplomas already have been awarded to Washington, Arlington and Alexandria boys.

Montgomery County lads will receive their diplomas at the Rock Creek Recreation Center, Friday at 2 p. m., as part of a badminton and horseshoe-pitching championship program.

Fairfax County pupils will get their diplomas at 1 p. m., Friday, at the locations where the schools were held.

Prince Georges County diplomas will be awarded some time next week. Officials of the Prince Georges baseball schools are making plans now.

All groups attending the game are requested to etner the ball park through the 5th st. entrance. Recreation department supervisors will assemble the boys, and a whopping big time should be had by all.

Dudley's Boss Reveals 'Big' Offer by Lions

Charlottesville, Va., July 30 (AP).—Norton G. Pritchett, University of Virginia athletic director, said today that Bill Dudley, Virginia backfield coach and former Pittsburgh Steeler, has been made a "very tempting offer" by the Detroit Lions of the National Football League to return to professional football.

"Bill talked with Coach (Art) Guepe and me concerning the matter only a few days ago," Pritchett said. "They have made him a very tempting offer. In fact, I think it is very flattering.

"I don't know that anything has come out of the offer, yet. Bill promised to notify us the moment he makes up his mind."

Married in Lynchburg yesterday to Miss Elizabeth Leininger and now on his wedding trip, Dudley could not be reached for comment. Pritchett indicated the university would release him from his contract if he asks.

In Detroit the Lions said today they hoped to get Dudley back into professional football, but declared that the former University of Virginia had not yet accepted a salary offer believed to approach $20,000 for 1947.

Owner Fred Mandel of the Lions said that since Dudley announced his retirement from the pro grame last fall the Detroit club received permission from the Steelers to sign him if they could.

Under the agreement, the Detroit club was to make a settlement wit' the Steelers in cash or players if they obtained his services, possibly transferring fullback Camp Wilson or Elmer (Tippy) Madarik to Pittsburgh.

Verdict Awaited

Nats, Browns Tied, 1 to 1, in 9th Inning

The Nats and the St. Louis Browns were tied, 1 to 1, going into the ninth inning of last night's game at Griffith Stadium, the second of a three-game series.

A pitcher's duel between Walter Masterson and Ellis Kinder, St. Louis righthander was in progress in the early innings as 12,000 fans watched on a sweltering night.

Masterson held the Browns hitless in the first four innings, meanwhile being staked to a 1-0 lead with the Nats scoring off Kinder in the second.

Going into the fifth, only one man reached base against Masterson. Willard Brown, colored outfielder, was safe on Priddy's fumble in the third, but was wiped out on an attempt to steal as Early fanned, and Masterson faced only 12 Browns in the first four innings.

Mickey Vernon's safe bunt opening the third set up the Nats' run. He took second on Spence's infield out and with two out he scored on a double to center by Christman.

Masterson's visions, if any, of a no-hit game were punctured in the sixth when Pitcher Kinder singled solidly to center for the Browns' first hit. With two out, Berardino singled to left, and Robertson's fumble of the hit put men on second and third. Vernon made a fancy play on Lehner's grounder to retire the side.

The hits stood at two for each club until Yost singled to right with one out in the Nats' sixth, but they failed to move him past second.

Tie Score in Seventh

The Browns rapped Masterson for two hits behind a base on balls to Heath, starting the seventh, and tied the score, 1-1, after filling the bases with none out.

Stephens singled after Heath walked, and Judnich's safe bunt put three on. Masterson tightened to fan Brown for the first out, but Early moved Heath home with a fly to Lewis.

Stan Spence averted further trouble for Masterson with a sensational one-hand catch of Kinder's long drive to deep center.

Mickey Vernon opened the Nats' seventh with a double to right, but the Nats got nothing. Spence flied out, Vernon was out stealing third, and Priddy popped up.

Blackwell Just Couldn't Pitch Ball Outside

Cincinnati, July 30 (AP).—Ewell Blackwell stalked into the Cincinnati Reds dressing room today after blowing his chance to set a modern record for consecutive pitching victories and complained that he had been unable to pitch a ball outside to the winning New York Giants throughout the 10 innings of play.

The 6-foot-5 hurler, who was seeking his 17th straight National League victory, also complained bitterly about the called third strike that put him out at the start of the Reds' half of the ninth inning when he could have started one of those hypothetical rallies that win ball games on paper.

He had nothing to say about the breaking of his victory string.

"It was that far outside," he said with a fisherman's gesture in describing the third strike called against him. "That pitch was a foot outside."

After that strike Blackwell, Manager Johnny Neun and others talked loudly to Larry Goetz, the umpire, with the usual result.

The two home-run balls he pitched—one to Walker Cooper, the other to Willard Marshall, were both fast ones on the inside, Blackwell said.

Cincy Hurler Bows in 10th; Kerr Drives In Blattner

Cincinnati, July 30 (AP).—Lady Luck ran out on Ewell Blackwell today as the New York Giants downed the Cincinnati Reds, 5-4, in 10 innings to end the lanky right-hander's winning streak at 16 games—just three short of Rube Marquard's all-time major league mark set while pitching for the Giants of 1912.

Blackwell, who hurled his 17 consecutive complete game, had had some narrow squeaks while compiling the longest winning streak since Carl Hubbell won 16 in a row for the 1936 Giants.

Included in Blackwell's sensational skein which began May 10, were two victories over the Giants and a no-hit, no run triumph over the Boston Braves.

The rangy Californian appeared headed for his seventeenth straight conquest as he entered the ninth with a 4-3 lead but Willard Marshall belted his twenty-seventh homer of the season with one out to send the game into overtime.

Homers Factors

In the following frame, Buddy Blattner led off with a walk and moved to second on Relief Pitcher Monte Kennedy's sacrifice. Blackwell disposed of Bill Rigney on a grounder to Grady Hatton but Buddy Kerr lined a single to center to plate Blattner from second with the winning run.

The 24-year-old star was moving with a 2-0 lead, pitching no-hit ball until the fifth when Walker Cooper slammed his 23rd home run with one out.

A crowd of 13,084 fans saw the Reds move out in front in the third at the expense of starter Clint Hartung on a walk, sacrifice, and a double by Hatton and a single by former Giant Babe Young.

The Giants took the lead by scoring twice in the sixth on Hartung's triple.

Young Ties Score

Young tied the score by clouting his 11th homer of the year. After Bert Haas fouled out, Augie Galan walked and Ray Lamanno singled to drive Hartung from the box. Eddie Miller greeted reliefer Ken Trinkle with a single to score Galan and shove the Reds ahead, 4-3.

The American League mark of 16 straight wins is shared by Joe Wood, Walter Johnson, Lefty Grove and Schoolboy Rowe.

Fenty O Snares Fork Purse at Bel Air, 28th Favorite to Win in 7 Days

Bosley Hurt As His Horse Stumbles

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bel Air, Md., July 30.—Favorite players had their innings here today, L. W. Jennings' Fenty O being the fifth bettors' choice to score in the first six events when the 4-year-old won the featured Fork Purse.

The son of Charley O was the twenty-eighth favorite to win during the seven days of racing here and returned his backers a $4.20 mutuel.

The winner finished a half length in front of Mrs. L. O. Rogers' How Happy with Fred Kirsch's Kitty Kilts in third position in the speedy field of eight over six and a half furlongs. The winner was clocked in 1:20 1/5 on a fast strip.

Jockey Jimmy Baird was up on Fenty O and shunned an early speed battle involving Talcum Spray, Iddle Gossip, How Happy and Kitty Kilts.

Baird waited until the turn for home, slipped the favorite through other horses and kept him going cleverly to the end.

How Happy, a long shot, came through on the inside and was wearing down the winner gradually at the finish. Kitty Kilts was forced to race wide throughout and showed a commendable effort.

The day's fastest race was the fifth, won by J. K. Wynkoop's Dr. Johnson with Sammy Palumbo up. The 7-year-old went the mile and a sixteenth in 144 4/5 and equalled the track record, set by Lawless Miss, August 3, 1946. J. R. Bringhurst's Tristernagh and E. N. Kratz's Flags followed the winner into the wire.

John Bosley, 3d, of the Bosley family which owned the famous Chase Me, was injured in the day's steeplechase. Bosley was aboard L. Merryman's Spicy Lady and the mare stumbled at the first fence, sending him to the turf heavily. He was taken to the Havre de Grace hospital with a hip injury.

For the first time at the meeting, a favorite failed in the jumping event. S. R. Fry's Vaden King was installed the choice but was no match for Mrs. William D. Thomas Firebet, a $7.60 shot.

Third money went to J. G. Leiper's Westy Low, an entrymate of the winner. Firebet, well handled by Jockey B. Ansteatt, was clocked for the approximate two miles over 16 fences in 4:18.

Marlboro Decision Due This Week

Baltimore, July 30 (AP).—The Maryland Racing Commission probably will meet this week to decide whether to grant racing dates to the Marlboro race track for a fall meeting.

This was announced by commission members after an inspection of the Southern Maryland plant yesterday.

To date, the commission has refused to grant the Southern Maryland Agricultural Fair Association, operators of the track, a license because of "the condition" of the facilities.

One commissioner said after the inspection tour that he had noted "there has been some brushing up" at Marlboro in recent weeks.

After a similar inspection early this month, Commission Chairman Stuart S. Janney, jr., had said "everything is wrong at Marlboro except the racing strip itself."

He added that "a miracle will have to be passed" if the track were put in satisfactory condition for a license before September.

Since that time, repairs have been made and track operators said they were hopeful of obtaining a license.

Duck Hunters, Officials Weigh Season's Length

Belair, Md., July 30 (AP).—Game Warden Ernest A. Vaughn and Chief Deputy George Chields today conferred with duck hunters of Cecile and Harford Counties preparatory to deciding whether Maryland would request a straight 30-day season or a split season of two 14-day periods. The request must be approved by the United States Fish and Wildlife Service.

Worsham Eliminated on 19th Hole

Wolfe Loses To Bubby In 1st Round

Peoria, Ill., July 30—Marvin (Bubby) Worsham, Washington, D. C.'s last hope in the National Junior Chamber of Commerce golf tournament, today bowed, 1 up on the nineteenth hole, in the second 18-hole round of match play to Gene May, of Spokane, Wash., a darkhorse.

After qualifying with a 77, 75—152 yesterday, the younger brother of Lew Worsham, National Open champion, this morning was given the unpleasant assignment of teeing off against teammate Gene Wolfe and won, 5 and 4.

Two down on the ninth hole of the afternoon round, Worsham came through with a birdie on the tenth. May retaliated with a birdie on the twelfth, but Worsham posted successive birdies on the fourteenth and fifteenth to even matters.

Muff Chances on 17th

Both boys blew chances on the seventeenth with bogey fours, but recovered to halve the eighteenth with birdies again. Then Worsham muffed the nineteenth when he stroked his second shot into a trap, May winning with a birdie three.

John Morris of Atlanta, Ga., also advanced to the third round at the Mount Hawley Country Club by upsetting comedalist Wesley Brown of Chattanooga, Tenn., 2 and 1.

Earlier Morris had ousted Bob Hinson of Lakeland, Fla., by winning a nineteen-hole thriller, 1 up.

Brown had a tougher fight on his hand in his first-round match when Dick Pogue of Watertown, Minn., carried him to the twentieth hole before succumbing, 1 up.

Among the favorites to advance to the third round was defending champion Al Mengert of Spokane, Wash., who today eliminated two lads from Madison, Wis.

Beats Madison Entrants

In his first match Mengert downed Doug Campbell, 3 and 2. In the afternoon he eliminated Campbell's townsman, Dave Barclay, 4 and 2.

Ray (Spike) Beeber of Klamath Falls, Oreg., runnerup to Mengert in the inaugural tourney, advanced with a second round 4 and 2 triumph over Chick Battey of Lincoln, Nebr. In his first round match Beeber downed Walker Inman of Augusta, Ga., 1 up.

Co-medalist Bob Peters of Kansas City, Kans., advanced with victories over Rufus Hughes, Paducah, Ky., 3 and 1, and Bernard Riviere, Houston, Tex., 5 and 4.

Sealtest Evens Playoff Series

Sealtest defeated Hardy's Barber Shop, 6-5, in two extra innings yesterday on the Ellpise to tie up the Pee Wee Class championship playoff series at one game apiece.

Billy Nolan's third single of the day scored Dale Larsen from third base with the winning run, Hugh Waln's no-hit, no-run five inning relief pitching job saved the game for Sealtest.

The teams will meet in the deciding playoff contest tomorrow at 2 p. m.

Schaefer, Fonder Renew Race Duel

An old feud will be resumed tomorrow night when Ed "Dutch" Schaefer, leading money winner at the West Lanham, Md., Speedway, and George Fonder, who gained that distinction a year ago, race on the seven-event midget automobile competition at 8:30 o'clock.

It was announced last night that Bill Brundige, sports director of Station WOL, will broadcast the racing tomorrow night and throughout the remainer of the season at 9:30.

Junior Board Giving Redskins 'Sendoff' Luncheon Today

THE Junior Board of Commerce is giving the Redskins a sendoff luncheon at 12:30 p. m. today at the Burlington Hotel.

The luncheon marks the arewell to 18 players and five coaches who will, after the dinner, leave for the Skins' training headquarters in California.

Speeches by the players, coaches and members of the host group are expected to fill the program.

Following the affair, the advance guard of players and coaches will entrain on the Liberty Limited from Union Station at 5:30 p. m. for the long trip to the West Coast.

Players will be picked up at Harrisburg, Pa., Pittsburgh, Chicago, Kansas City and Belem, N. Mex. In addition, 17 huskies will join the squad at its Occidental College, Calif., training quarters, bringing the squad total to 53.

After arriving at Occidental on the third of August, the players will receive physical checkups and get their equipment.

On Monday, August 4, the Skins will begin the rigorous two-a-day practice sessions which will culminate in the intra-squad game between the Eastern and Western members of the squad on August 29 for the benefit of the Santa Anna Register Hospital Fund.

In charge of the advance party are Head Coach Turk Edwards and Assistants Ki Aldrich, Wilbur Moore, Wayne Milner and Herman Ball.

Included among the players leaving from here are Jim Youel, Doug Turley, Tommy Mont, Jim Gillette, Jim Gaffney, John Lookabaugh, Dick Poillon, Jim Hefti, Bill Gold, Henry Harris, Bernie Brosky and Bert Dressler.

Paterson Stripped of Boxing Title

London, July 30 (AP).—Jackie Paterson of Glasgow, Scotland, was deprived of the world flyweight title he had held for four years today by concurrent action of the British Boxing Board of Control and the National Boxing Association of the United States.

Dado Marino of Honolulu, against whom Paterson was to have defended his crown July 16 before he collapsed and failed to weigh in for the bout, was named by both boards as the logical contender.

The winner of a scrap between Marino and Rinty Monaghan of Ireland will be recognized as the new 112-pound king. That bout has not yet been signed. Marino defeated the Irishman, a last-minute substitute, when Monaghan was disqualified for holding in the ninth round of their July 16 meeting.

Charles Donmall, secretary of the board, said Paterson would not be able to appeal the decision under existing regulations.

Abe Greene, NBA head, quickly followed up the board of control's decision with an announcement from his Patterson, N. J., office. "We will recognize the Marino-Monaghan bout for the title," he added.

In New York, Commissioner Eddie Eagan said the New York State Athletic Commission would take no immediate action.

District Boys Advance at National Nets

Kalamazoo, Mich., July 30.—The Chevy Chase team of Gilbert Bogley and Jack Yates, defeated William Vastian and James Wesley both of Indianapolis, 6—2, 6—2, today in the junior doubles of the National Junior tennis championships.

The victory qualified Bogley and Yates to meet the second-seeded team of MacDonald Mathey, Princeton, N. J., and Sidney Schwartz, Brooklyn, in the third round tomorrow.

Gerry Thomas of Washington, paired with Stuart Robinson of New York City to beat John Fleitz of Long Beach, Calif., and Wells Peck, Beverley Hills, Calif., 7—5, 7—5, in the second round. Tomorrow they meet Harry Laser, Chicago, and Sonny Bradley of Decatur, Ill., in the third round.

Rogers Triumphs

In the boys' division doubles, Ted Rogers of Chevy Chase, and his partner, David Mathey of Princeton, N. J., defeated Charles Neave and Mord Bogie of New York City, 6—3, 6—1.

It looked more and more today like Herbert (Buddy) Behrens against the field in the singles as the freckle-faced National scholastic champion from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., swept into the quarterfinals.

Behrens blasted out Keston Deimling of River Forest, Ill., 6—0, 6—1, in today's fourth round to take his eighth straight set. En route Behrens has lost only two games in four matches.

Tony Trabert of Cincinnati, who upset Behrens in the semifinals of the title remained in the running by downing William Long of Jackson Heights, N. Y., 6—4, 7—5.

Brouiltte Will Be Arraigned Tomorrow in Katona Slaying

JOSEPH BROUILLETTE

MRS. MARJORIE BROUILLETTE

Seaman 1/c Daniel Brouilette will be arraigned tomorrow morning on a first degree murder charge in the slaying of Mrs. Julia Katona.

The wife of a Navy lieutenant, mother of 8-year-old twins, Mrs. Katona was found nude and strangled in a Tall Timbers cabin after a poker game July 23.

Defense counsel, State Senator Paul J. Bailey, has indicated he will waive preliminary hearing for the 22-year-old husband of three months before Trial Magistrate J. Ralph Abell at the Leonardtown court house.

The case would then go to the grand jury, which convenes the third Monday in September, according to State's Attorney C. Henry Camalier.

Meanwhile, Brouilette is being visited three times each day at the jail by his pretty, blonde wife, Marjorie Anne, who told a reporter she was convinced of his innocence because of his "gentle disposition" and good character.

She takes sandwiches, milk and fruit to her husband, who served in the galley at Cedar Point Air Test Center. She said he found the jail food unpalatable.

Mrs. Brouilette, a former insurance company secretary, said she met "Danny" on a Boston-bound train in January and they were married April 30, this year. She has a child by a previous marriage.

Art Instructor Asks Protection From City Police

Atlanta, July 30 (AP).—Paul Rene Refoule, French art teacher, who withstoid beatings in a German cencentration camp, appealed to a U. S. dist court today for protection against Fulton County (Atlanta) police.

Affidavits by Refoule, his brother-in-law and mother-in-law related vain attempts by police to extract a confession that Refoule murdered his young socialite wife.

Refoule asks $50,000 damages and an injunction. Federal Judge E. M. Underwood continued the case until 10 a. m. tomorrow. Refoule said he had been grilled by police on three occasions for periods ranging from 24 to 30 hours, during which he was mauled, beaten, slapped, punched and kicked, and sometimes choked.

Refoule is free on $10,000 bond, awaiting trial on a sex charge in-indictment, which he said was false.

Sweden Asks Russia To Recall Two Envoys

Stockholm, Sweden, July 29 (Delayed) (U.P.).—The Swedish foreign office has asked Moscow to recall Russian military attache Konov and a member of the Russian legation named Mihailov, well-informed political quarters said, because the two men took a "vacation" in a Swedish military region on the Finnish border near Tornedalen.

Britain Scores Romanian Blow

London, July 30 (U.P.).—A Foreign Office spokesman said today the British government took a "very serious view" of the Romanian parliament's decision last night to dissolve the National Peasant Party.

He said the Soviet government agreed in December, 1945, that a Peasant Party representative should be included in the Romanian government.

Informed British quarters said the government would send another note to Romania or take up the matter with other signatories of the Romanian peace treaty.

Montgomery Plans to Build 23 Miles of Roads This Year

Sometime next week, J. O. Harvey, Montgomery County road supervisor, will call up a certain farmer and ask if he has harvested his wheat yet.

If the answer is yes, road building equipment will descend on the farmer's wheat field to build more miles of road as part of the county's record-shattering road building program this year.

Harvey, who is 43 and balding, personally knows nearly every stone on every road in Montgomery. Yesterday he escorted reporters on a five-hour, 150-mile tour of county roads.

It was the idea of County Supervisor Irving G. McNayr who said he wanted "to get across to the public just what we are doing in our road building program."

Over good roads, bad roads and indifferent ones (with streams running down the middle), Harvey drove on relentlessly while reporters sweated and scribbled.

Scheduled for construction this year in the county is 23 miles of road, more than in any previous year in county history.

Ten miles of a new type road are already under construction, Harvey said. In the past, he explained, many roads were built with no grading or drainage facilities and without adequate base or permanent surface put on an existing road bed.

Under the new plan, existing road beds are graded and receive a base of heavy stone and dirt, mixed thoroughly to a depth of six inches. After rolling a half-inch layer of blue stone is placed on top and rolled. This provides an all-weather road for about two years. Then it gets a permanent macadam surface.

Biggest project in the so-called new "stage construction" plan is the rebuilding of the Dickerson-Boyds road for 5½ miles, at a cost of $90,000. Formerly a winding, up-and-down, one-lane dirt road, the finished product will be a level, 16-foot wide roadbed with a 30-foot right of way, running to Gaithersburg.

Also under construction now are the Turkey Foot road from Darnestown to Travillah, a two-mile project, and the Gaithersburg to Goshen rd., a distance of three miles.

Harvey will have $300,000 for road maintenance this year. In addition, he said, there will be proceeds from a $450,000 bond issue sold last year for new construction, plus $100,000 the commissioners are expected to appropriate for the widening of old single-lane bridges.

By O. B. Troup

THE ROUTE FROM BOYDS TO DICKERSON—Rcently a winding, 5½-mile, dirt, one-lane road, this will soon be a modern thoroughfare. "Buck" Lewis, bulldozer operator, of Thurmont, Md., was busy grading the roadway yesterday when Montgomery County Road Supervisor J. O. Harvey arrived with reporters inspecting county roads

Markham Sees Chief Today

The status of Col. Edward M. Markham, jr., in Alexandria's city government may be settled today, when he is scheduled to talk over his resignation as assistant city engineer with City Manager Carl Budwesky.

The question of Markham's resignation on July 20 while he was in West Virginia came up at Tuesday's Council meeting, along with the resignations of the police and fire chiefs. Budwesky told the Council he would confer with Markham on the subject as soon as possible.

Budwesky had said previously that he hoped he could convince Markham to reconsider his resignation. Markham indicated Monday, shortly after his return, that he might reconsider. But he said he could not under the existing organization of the engineering department.

He said he had resigned because of "lack of cooperation from my immediate superior."

One councilman voiced the hope at Tuesday's meeting that the city would not lose the services of Markham, who, he said, appeared to be one of the best qualified men in the city government.

Colonel Markham was graduated from West Point in 1928 and holds a degree in civil engineering from Cornell University. He was an engineer during all his 19 years of military service.

Colonel Milligan Is Named WAC Deputy Director

Lieut. Col. Mary Louise Milligan, Pittsburgh, Pa., yesterday was named deputy director of the Women's Army Corps by Col. Mary A. Hallaren, WAC director. Colonel Milligan has been serving as executive officer of the procurement and separation branch in the War Department's personnel division.

Milligan

She joined the WAC when it was organized in 1942, and later became director of the WAC training center at Des Moines, Iowa, where she received her commission as second lieutenant in the first officers' class.

She is the daughter of Mrs. Alice G. Milligan, Pittsburgh.

U. S., Reds Hope To Settle Views On Korea's Rule

Seoul, July 30 (AP).—The two chief delegates to the joint U. S. Soviet Commission told Koreans today they hoped to settle their differences concerning what Korean groups will be consulted by the commission in laying the groundwork for a provisional government for all of Korea.

Speaking to a crowd in Nam San Park, Maj. Gen. Albert E. Brown, chief American delegate, reiterated the American view that the Korea provisional government will belong to all people and to all political parties.

Col. Gen. T. F. Shtikov, chief Soviet delegate, told the audience that "every day of struggling against the Moscow decision (on the governing of Korea) is one more day separating the Korean people from creation of their own democratic government."

New Army Plane Is Flight-Tested

The Army Air Forces said yesterday that its new Boeing XI-15—a weird-looking plane with a "gondola" type fusilage and a single boom leading to a twin tail—has made a successful test flight at the Boeing company's Wichita, Kans., headquarters.

The AAF said the plane can take off an delear a 50-foot obstacle in 600 feet, climb 628 feet a minute and cruise at 100 miles an hour. It can also hover at less than 50 miles an hour an dland at 35 miles an hour.

The craft was designed for aerial observation, photography and communications.

Burma Coup d'Etat Assassins Caught, Attlee Believes

London, July 30.—Prime Minister Attlee told the Commons today that there was every reason to believe the slayers of the seven members of the Burmese government had been apprehended and that the assassinations on July 19 were part of a plot to overthrow the government.

Attlee again denied that the British government had had any connection with the "recent outrages" in Burma.

The Prime Minister made no mention of U Saw and other prominent members of the Myochit Party—which had been in opposition to the government—who were promptly rounded up and put in jail following the murders.

WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, JULY 31, 1947

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Bill for Pension Fund Withdrawal Is Signed

The President yesterday signed the Jones retirement bill into law. Briefly, the act will permit former Federal workers who have had less than 10 years of service to withdraw their money, with interest, from the Civil Service retirement fund. Formerly, employes with more than five years of service were compelled to leave their money in the system.

Kluttz

Civil Service estimates that upward of 40,000 former employes will take advantage of the law and withdraw their money.

However, the commission explained that former employes with more than five and less than 10 years of service have a vested right in a future pension if they elect to leave their money in the retirement system. Thos who take refunds will forfeit this right unless they rejoin the service and later redeposit their full deductions.

The law covers any employe with between five and 10 years of service. It makes no difference whether he was laid off or voluntarily resigned.

Several thousand have already applied for refunds—applications which were denied under the old law.

Civil Service yesterday announced that these and other such employes now must make new applications in order to be considered for a refund. It outlined this procedure to be followed by each person who wishes a refund:

To obtain and fill out a copy of Form 3005, the refund of deductions form. Copies may be had at either Civil Service or in the personnel office of the person's former agency. The completed Form 3005 should be mailed direct to the Civil Service retirement division in this city. The commission promises to pay off the claims in an average of 30 days.

But if you want my advice, here it is: don't withdraw your money unless you need it. In the retirement fund, your money will pay you a big dividend later in the form of a pension—a pension that would cost you far more money than you'll get back if you had to buy the old-age protection from a private insurance concern.

JOBS: Civil Aeronautics has openings for about 200 single men as aircraft communicators in Alaska. Salaries range from $3306 to 35636. Send applications to CAA, P. O. Box 1082, Oklahoma City, Okla. . . . FHA: Senator Thomas (D., Utah) said yesterday that Franklin D. Richards was in line to be appointed commissioner of Federal Housing. He added that Raymond Foley would be appointed administrator of the new Housing and Home Finance Agency, the new over-all housing agency.

PEOPLE: These employes will be retired today from Veterans Administration here: Sara D. Dennis, Anna C. Dettlebach and Blanche M. Fant . . . Arthur A. Brown is the new fire chief for the Forest Service. He succeeds the late David Godwin who was killed last month in a plane crash . . . Miss Tracy Copp retires today as assistant director of Federal Security's Office of Vocational Rehabilitation. In 1920 Miss Copp helped organize the Nation-wide program for disabled civilians which that agency now directs.

FBI: The Federal Bureau of Investigation is accepting applications for the 2500 or so new jobs it will have under the President's Federal worker loyalty program. Applications can be filed for both clerical and G-man jobs in its personnel office in the Justice Department building.

MOVES: The Securities and Exchange Commission will be moved into the buildings on E st. known as Annexes 1 and 2 of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. The buildings are now occupied by RFC and War Assets and both agencies have been given notice to vacate.

The WAA offices will be moved to the temporary buildings on lower 17th st. nw across from the Reflecting Pool. In fact, all WAA offices will be centralized there. The central offices will also be moved there from the Railroad Retirement building. When that happens, Federal Security will be assigned the WAA space in the retirement building.

It is now planned to move SEC here from Philadelphia in September. About the same time Civil Service's fourth regional office in Winston-Salem, N. C. also will be moved back to the 7th st. building.

PERSONAL PATRONAGE: It will be investigated by the staff of the House Civil Service Committee during the congressional recess. Chairman Rees has repeatedly accused Federal administrators of breaking laws to keep their "pet" people during a reduction of force. Rees has been most critical of agencies that fire career employes and veterans while retaining war service and temporary employes. He has also called on the Civil Service Commission to crack down on such agencies. The commission is at work on a program to give greater job protection to career employes and veterans.

Rees said he will return here in about six weeks to help direct the investigation. He said he would sponsor legislation to correct the abuses if the investigation bears out his charges.

FBI Opens Inquiry Into Methods of D. C. Police

Bureau to Suggest Improvements in Crime Reporting, Record Keeping

The FBI yesterday began an "inquiry" into police statistics, one month after The Washington Post disclosed numerous crime complaints were being hidden.

"At the request of the Metropolitan Police Department," said the FBI, "J. Edgar Hoover, director of the FBI, has instructed that the FBI immediately begin a thorough inquiry into the crime reporting practices, procedures and systems of the Metropolitan Police Department with a view to making such recommendations as may be necessary in line with uniform crime reporting and records procedure."

Several FBI men were sent to police headquarters yesterday morning to start the "inquiry."

The action was taken a few hours after Chief of Detectives Floyd A. Truscott brought the request of Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett to the FBI.

The FBI compiles crime statistics for the entire country. The figures show the number of crimes reported and the number of cases closed by the police, thereby acting as an indication of police efficiency in curbing crime and apprehending criminals.

The Washington Post found that the Detective Bureau under the then Chief of Detectives Barrett had ordered more than 600 robbery complaints be "held" and not reported to crime statistics. That number was concealed during 11 months of the last fiscal year. The 600 hidden complaints were in addition to the 761 officially recorded.

Smith, Hoey Come to Aid Of Policeman

Five men with long criminal records testified against Police Pvt. James A. Stewart, jr., before a trial board which recommended his dismissal, Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) said yesterday.

His letter to Commissioner John Russell Young was one of several seeking clemency for Stewart who was accused of maltreating Daniel J. Fitzpatrick, a Georgetown University student.

"I have been advised," wrote Smith, "that five of the witnesses who testified against Officer Stewart have been previously arrested from 25 to 40 times each. They have been charged with most of the crimes, including murder and robbery."

Hoey Urges Another Chance

Smith declared he did "not wish to make any recommendation" but that the allegations should be weighed before the sentence was confirmed by the Commissioners.

Senator Clyde A. Hoey (D., N. C.) said that Sewart deserved another chance because "this is the first charge that has ever been brought against him."

"I do not pretend to know anything about the details of the offense, but since the other officer who was likewise convicted has been permitted to return to duty, I feel that Mr. Stewart should also be given another chance . . ."

Georgetown Merchants Plead

Charles D'Andelet, of the Colonial Furniture Co., 3275 M st. nw., asked that a committee of six or more Georgetown businessmen be heard in their request for clemency.

"Stewart has been a very able and aggressive policeman," he told a reporter," and he has been very helpful."

He said more than 70 merchants had signed a petition urging that Stewart be reinstated after a small fine, and that he be retained on duty in Georgetown.

Police Pvt. Warren L. Garrett, companion of Stewart at the time of the incident June 4 also was found guilty by the trial board. It recommended a fine of $350 and restoration to duty.

King to Tell Council

London, July 30 (AP).—King George VI is to give formal public consent to the marriage of Princess Elizabeth to Lieut. Philip Mountbatten at a Privy Council meeting tomorrow under procedure required by the 175-year-old Royal Marriages Act.

In Fairfax

Police Seek 3 Road Gang Fugitives

State guards and Fairfax County police were searching last night for three prisoners who escaped from a Camp Thirty road gang yesterday morning.

Guard Harlow Gwin at the work camp said the men suddenly broke and ran as they were working with a group on Old Dominion Drive near McLean in Fairfax County. They got away despite two shots fired by the guard on duty.

It was the second escape from the camp in two days. One prisoner escaped from a road crew Tuesday in the confusion resulting from a flight of hornets.

Fairfax police flashed an interstate lookout for the three men. They were: Charles M. Lee, 21, Mooreheadd, Ky., serving 5½ years for grand larceny and three previous escapes; Chrales Calvert, 16, Harrisburg, Pa., serving four years for grand larceny, and Lawrence Fields, 22, Portsmouth, Va., serving 18 years for robbery and and grand larceny.

Quiet Thief Steals $1196 As Two Sleep

Benjamin Goldmans Robbed in Bedroom Of Alaska Ave. Home

A sound sleep and a soft-footed housebreaker cost the Benjamin Goldmans $1196 Tuesday night.

The money, all but $10 of it in a billfold in Goldman's trousers, was taken from the bedroom of their home, 7567 Alaska ave. nw., while they slept. The $10 was in Mrs. Goldman's purse.

Elsewhere, taxi bandits, housebreakers and burglars carried off loot valued at almost $1000, but a sleuth-minded woman tipped police on a cleaning shop robbery in time for them to make two arrests.

Joyce Ridgeway, 1831 Mintwood pl nw., was returning home early yesterday when she heard two 'teen-age boys discussing a break-in of a cleaning establishment at 1856 Columbia rd. nw.

She called the 13th Precinct and Acting Sergt. A. J. Sweeney and Pvt. Robert S. Eichelberger arrived in time to catch one youth inside the place, another at the door. They were charged with housebreaking and held for juvenile authorities.

Cash and merchandise valued at $800 was taken from the Fairfax Village Pharmacy, 3827 Pennsylvania ave. se. The loot, according to Leon L. Cohen, owner, included $102 cash, four cameras, electric razor, pen and pencil sets and 40 cartons of cigarettes.

Furman B. Riser, 3312 Sherman ave. nw., reported loss of several suits of clothes, $180 in cash and a revolver from his home.

A man and woman teamed up to rob Taxi Driver Thomas Kinlow, 27, of 31 Florida ave. nw., of $18; then hauled him to Alexandria in his own cab and dumped him out. The cab was recovered by Alexandria police.

Executive Board Of Chest Meets Today on Survey

The Community Chest executive committee meets at 3 p. m. today for further study of the divergent reports of the Citizens Chest Survey committee and to consider agency memberships for 1948.

A report of the majority advocated definite standards for admission of Chest membership and urged closer relationship between chest and the Council of Social Agencies.

Three of the 15 members who originally signed the majority report subsequently withdrew their names and prepared a separate minority report. The original minority report signed by six members of the 25-member committee urged discontinuance of 22 agencies as Chest members.

Snyder Heads Home

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, July 30 (U.P.).—U. S. Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder departed for Washington today after a 10-day study of Brazil's economic and financial situation. He left behind a plea that this country open its doors to foreign capital as a means of developing its vast resources.

Municipal League Urges Va. To Increase School Support

Richmond, Va., July 30 (AP).—The Virginia League of Municipalities today recommended to the legislative commission studying State and local taxation that the State appropriations for support of public free schools "should be increased to an amount approximating total instructional costs in both the counties and municipalities."

The recommendation handed the commission headed by Delegate H. H. Adams of Eastville, was one of seven included in a comprehensive report on the financial problems of Virginia cities and towns and the need for new sources of municipal revenue prepared by a special committee of the league under the chairmanship of William Hodges Mann, Petersburg mayor.

Other recommendations handed the commission studying taxation, at its meeting which started at noon in the House appropriations committee room at the capitol, included:

Two-thirds of the profits of the beer excise tax should be distributed to the counties, cities and towns on the same basis as the ABC profits are now distributed.

The capital tax policy of the State should be altered to allow the localities to tax all tangible personal property now classified as "capital" except inventories which are to remain as capital.

Prohibitions and restrictions relating to local taxing powers as set forth in the State tax code should be removed.

D. C. Mental Health Funds Are Boosted

$11,365 U. S. Grant To Mean Expansion Of Staff, Program;

An $11,365 grant from the United States Public Health Service will enable the District to expand its mental health facilities in fiscal 1948, Health Department officials revealed yesterday.

Dr. Leopold Wexberg, director of the Bureau of Mental Hygiene, said he also had asked USPHS for an additional $30,000 to set up four mental health research projects here.

The $11,365 from USPHS, added to the bureau's $30,734 regular budget for 1948—will make it possible to hire four additional staff members, Dr. Wexberg said.

Part of New Funds

USPHS granted the money to the District from a $7,500,000 national mental health fund recently appropriated by Congress.

Dr. Ruth Stocking, a staff physician, will take on part-time duties as a psychiatrist and a doctor will be hired to take over part of her present medical work, Dr. Wexberg revealed.

Gertrude Marill, a Yale graduate, has already been hired as a full-time psychologist. A psychiatric social worker and a clerical worker will also be added to the staff, he said.

The new personnel will help push the mental health program now carried on by eight staff members at two alcoholic clinics, a mental clinic, a child guidance center, and a clinic for epileptics.

Research Still 'Hope'

Dr. Wexberg said plans for the research projects were still a "vague hope" which depended entirely on USPHS's granting of the $30,000 request. They would include:

Study of the effects of alcoholism on personalities and an attempt to find what types of persons are most susceptible to the disease.

Investigation of marriage problems by a psychiatrist and a psychiatric social worker, with a lawyer and a minister assisting as consultants.

A program of aid for girls who are prostitutes or are drifting toward prostitution. Health Department's venereal disease bureau would assist in the project by supplying cases.

Clinics Suspend for August

A study of emotionally unstable children who have trouble learning to read. Staff members will attempt to establish a connection between children's educational difficulties and emotional problems produced by hectic home life.

At the same time, Dr. Wexberg announced that Wednesday evening Alcoholic Clinic sessions at Force School, 1740 Massachusetts ave. nw., would be discontinued during August. Last session of the summer was held last night.

Other alcoholic clinics will continue in operation: Force School, Mondays at 5:30 p. m. and Fridays at 1:30 p. m.; Polk Health Center, Tuesdays at 5:30 p. m.

Three Convicted In Lottery Sue For Seized Money

Annapolis, Md., July 30 (AP).—Three Baltimoreans, convicted of operating a lottery, sought today to recover $7958 in cash taken from them when they were arrested by Anne Arundel County police in May.

Samuel Goldberg, Morris Walker and Hamilton Crandall in three separate bills filed in the county court asked declaratory judgments against County Police Chief John H. Souers and State's Attorney Marvin I. Anderson, in an attempt to force the return of the money.

The three were convicted and fined by Ferndale Magistrate David B. Dunker and fined $1000 and $2.50 costs each.

Judge William J. McWilliams gave Souers and Anderson until Monday to show cause why the money should not be turned over to the three men.

Annapolis Hospital Beneficiary of Elks

Annapolis, Md., July 30 (AP).—The Annapolis Elks Lodge presented today to the Emergency Hospital an oxygen tent, a resuscitator and a cardiograph.

The equipment, valued at $1800, was presented by Attorney Henry J. Tarantino, exalted ruler, and received by John Rich, president of the hospital's board of managers. The equipment was purchased with the proceeds from a charity ball last March.

Boat, Packing Plant Destroyed by Fire

Phoebus, Va., July 30 (AP).—Fire destroyed a Phoebus seafood packing plant and a fishing boat docked alongside early today causing $38,000 damage.

An investigation is under way to determine the cause of the blaze.

Firemen battled the fire for three hours after Fort Monroe military police turned in an alarm at 1 a. m.

Woman Dies at 100 After Breaking Hip

Truck Overturns in Collision . . .

The Washington Post

WOMEN INJURED IN CRASH—Two of the vehicles involved in a three-way collision yesterday at 48th and Albemarle sts. nw., in which a Pepco truck was overturned and two women drivers were injured. One auto struck the truck after it turned over, police reported. The truck driver was uninjured

Bus Line, Union Seek to Avert Strike Tonight

Blue Ridge Firm Asks Settlement Before Midnight Deadline

Officials of the Blue Ridge Bus Line and the union representing the company's drivers and maintenance workers will try today at Hagerstown, Md., to settle a wage dispute before a midnight strike deadline.

The bus line links Hagerstown, with Washington, Baltmiore, Frederick, Md., Winchester, Va., and Harrisburg, Pittsburgh and Washington, Pa.

It was reported that the company might offer a compromise of an increase of about 15 cents an hour in wages for consideration of a union membership meeting scheduled tonight at 8 p. m. at Hagerstown. The company's best previous offer was a 10 cents an hour raise. It was believed that the employes might accept the 15-cent an hour bopst, if offered.

Negotiations between the company and officials of Local 1335, Amalgamated Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America (AFL), broke down Tuesday and no further meetings have been scheduled.

Leo Riffle, president of the local, said if the strike deadline is reached tonight without settlement of the wage issue, 183 drivers and maintenance men will leave their jobs. He said the strike will cripple the entire Eastern division of the bus line.

Judge Criticizes Argument With Traffic Officer

It isn't disorderly conduct to argue with a policeman while he is directing traffic, but it isn't good sense, either.

So ruled Judge Nadine Gallagher of Municipal Court Tuesday in dismissing disorderly conduct charges against John K. Chapman, 37, War Assets Administration lawyer.

According to the evidence, Chapman walked against a red light at 7th st. and Florida ave. nw. Sunday on his way to the baseball game. Police Pvt. Robert B. Lewis, who was directing traffic, criticized this, but sent Chapman on his way to the game.

After the game, which Washington lost, Chapman came up to Lewis and asked for his name and badge number. Lewis was shepherding some 23,000 fans at the time, so Chapman was placed under arrest.

Commented Judge Gallagher, "I think you used poor judgment in interrupting the officer at that time."

$50,000 Awarded Woman Assaulted On Norfolk Boat

A 54-year-old woman who was criminally assaulted on a steamboat between Norfolk, Va., and Washington was awarded a $50,000 judgment against the steamboat company yesterday.

United States District Judge Sterling Hutcheson of Norfolk directed that the judgment in behalf of the victim, Mrs. Lillian Weade of Hilton Village, Va., be entered against Dichman, Wright & Pugh, Inc., operators of the vessel at the time, the Associated Press reported.

The jurist also entered judgment for $5000 for Mrs. Robert L. Stinemeyer, 55, who occupied an upper berth in the stateroom at the time of the attack, and $1000 in favor of Frederick Weade, husband of the victim.

A ship's cook was found guilty of the attack, which occurred in August, 1945. He has been executed.

Richmond WAA Chief Admits Delay in Claims

Richmond, Va., July 30 (AP).—J. M. Armstrong, Richmond regional director of the Was Assets Administration, said today he was forced to "plead guilty" to many of the charges of delay in settling veterans' claims for surplus property bought and paid for but not delivered.

He insisted, however, that the agency was making successful efforts to imprfove its service and correct unavoidable shipping errors before they developed into claims.

By Henry Rohland—The Washington Post

PRIEST CARRIED TO HOSPITAL—Dr. Ronald Strong, Emergency Hospital intern, and James Payne, ambulance driver, place Father Robert F. Humphries on a stretcher at 7th st. and Constitution ave. nw., yesterday. The 63-year-old priest from Cambridge, Mass., was struck by an auto at 2 p. m. Police said Father Humphries walked into the side of the vehicle. Although the driver stopped and helped Father Humphries to the sidewalk before driving off, police listed the traffic incident as "hit and run"

GOP to Have Straw Poll In Arlington

In an unusual straw poll to be held tomorrow and Saturday, Arlington Republicans will be asked to name their GOP presidential favorites for 1948 and to state their views on matters of State and county policy.

The referendum will be held at 40 places around the county coincident with Republican registration for the party convention to be held August 8.

Voters will be asked to state their preferences on: (1) presidential candidates, (2) party or nonpartisan candidates for county board and school board, (3) party campaign this year for a new State constitution, (4) annual voter registration, (5) civil service for county employes, (6) retirement privileges for county employes, (7) a local housing authority.

Meanwhile, the Arlington Better Government League, which sponsored the campaign to keep the party politics out of the county board and school board elections, appealed to Republicans to keep these elections on a nonpartisan basis.

A letter sent by the league to Republican voters said in part:

'Good local government requires broad citizen participation in necessary political activities. The Hatch Act and Civil Service rules prohibit active participation in local government by Federal employes, who constitute the largest segment ofthe population in Arlington, except on a nonpartisan basis."

Ploeser Asks House Committee To Probe FPHA

Representative Walter C. Ploeser (R., Mo.) Tuesday night asked the House Executive Expenditures Committee to conduct a "full-dress" investigation into charges of maladministration and improper use of Federal funds in the Federal Public Housing Authority.

Ploeser is chairman of a House Appropriations Subcommittee which conducted a preliminary investigation of FPHA during hearings on funds for the operation of Government corporations.

He said in a letter to Chairman Forest A. Harness (R., Ind.) of an Executive Expenditures subcommittee on publicity and propaganda activities of Government agencies, that his subcommittee found that FPHA "failed to carry out" the U. S. Housing Act and also uncovered other "startling revelations."

Sites for Two Institutions Up for Study

D. C. Medical Center, VA Hospital Before Park Board Today

Sites for the District Medical Center and the Veterans' Administration hospital came up for consideration again at a meeting today and tomorrow of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Also on the commission's agenda, it was announced, is a preliminary discussion of the proposed Arizona ave. expressway through Archbold Park and Glover parkway. An inspection trip of the area is planned.

W. E. Reynolds, Commissioner of Public Buildings, will present the results of studies his office has made relative to site of the proposed 22 million dollar, 1500-bed m edical center. The Naval Observatory-Industrial Home School tract has been under consideration.

Necessity of finding a location for the VA hospital follows congressional disapproval a short time ago of the Nevius tract in Arlington as the site. The VA had begun construction the Nevius tract prior to the House's rejection.

The commission also will hear a report on the status of the George Washington Memorial Parkway. A fund of $200,000 is available for extension of the parkway from the District line to Great Falls, Md. The NCPPC now has about 75 per cent of the Maryland land needed and the fund will boost its holdings to 90 per cent.

Slated for review by Planning Director John Nolen, jr., is the status of approximately 30 land acquisition projects, mostly playgrounds and recreation centers, which the commission hopes to clear up this year.

Thomas S. Settle, secretary of the NCPPC, will report on appropriations and legislative action of the Eightieth Congress.

Straw Girl's Father Seeks Word From Her

Holderness, N. H., July 30 (U.P.).—With authorities admittedly at a standstill in the disappearance of pretty 20-year-old Anne Straw, the wealthy foster parents of the missing heiress appealed to the girl to let them know if she is alive.

The Smith College senior vanished from her foster parents' summer lodge July 21. H. Ellis Straw, wealthy Manchester banker and textile executive, indicated he believed his adopted daughter to be alive.

16-Year-Old Boy Is Killed, 2 Hurt in Jeep Wreck

Employe of Bowie Track Dies as Blown Tire Sends Vehicle Into Somersaults

A 16-year-old Odenton, Md., youth was killed and two other persons injured late yesterday afternoon when the jeep in which they were riding overturned at Crain and Defense hwys.

In Washington, auto accidents hospitalized three persons.

The Maryland victim was John Chesley, an employe of the Bowie racetrack who was returning from a day's work at the Marlboro track.

Those injured were: Daniel M. Johnson, 30, and William Woodson, 26, both of Bowie.

Turns Three Somersaults

Prince Georges County Police Sergt. Richard J. Earnshaw said Johnson, driver of the car, would be charged with technical manslaughter. Earnshaw said a right tire blew out and somersaulted the jeep three times before it stopped against an embankment.

One man was injured early yesterday when a trailer truck and automobile collided near Lakeland rd. on Baltimore blvd. at Berwyn, Md.

The trailer truck overturned and disrupted early morning traffic on the boulevard. The truck was operated by Charlie Hardy Jefferson, 27, of Ringgold, Va., and the automobile by George Leroy Poole, 19, of Laurel, Md. Both were charged by Corporal Roland Sweitzer, Prince Georges County Police, with reckless driving and will appear September 11 in Hyattsville Police Court.

The injured man, Harry Spencer Roby, jr., of Burtonsville, Md., was taken to Leland Memorial Hospital, Riverdale, Md., by the Bladensburg Rescue Squad and treated for lacerations on the head.

Injured in the District accidents were:

Rev. Robert F. Humphries, 63, a Catholic priest of Cambridge, Mass., who was injured by a moving car at 9th and Constitution ave. nw. The driver stopped, helped him to the sidewalk and then drove away, police said. Father Humphries was treated at Emergency Hospital for cuts and a sprained right ankle.

Mrs. Ada Crans, 55, of 3917 Livingston st. nw.

Mrs. Nellie Hunt, 65, of the same address.

The two women were injured in a three-car crash at 48th and Albemarle st. nw. Mrs. Crans was driving one car which collided with a Pepco truck driven by Henry Whitehead, 34, of Route 2, Laurel, Md. A third auto, driven by Dorothy Reed, 42, of 3 Carvel Circle nw., struck the truck after it overturned.

Both were treated at Emergency Hospital and released.

Two inquests into recent traffic fatalities will be held at the District Morgue at 11:30 a. m. today.

Two Inquests Set

Representative Robert E. Jones, jr., (D., Ala.) is expected to be a witness i nthe inquest into the traffic death of David W. Appling, 60, of Occoquan, Va. Appling was struck by the taxi in which Jones was riding at Pennsylvania ave. and 3d st. nw. Monday. Driver of the cab was given by police as Wilbert A. Poole, 36, of 309 4th st. ne.

The second inquest will be into the death of Attlee A. Austin, 30, of 1318 36th st. nw., who died Sunday of injuries suffered July 13. Police who said driver of the car which struck him failed to stop after the accident, later arrested Jack O. Anderson, 20, of Baileys Crossroads, Va.

Colonial Beach Gold Rush Ends In Jewelers' Shop

Richmond, Va., July 30 (AP).—There won's be any "gold-rush" at Conolial Beach.

Henry Schwarzschild, Richmond jeweler, said today the gold nugget found Monday at Colonial Beach by Miss Frances Calvert of Richmand, is a real gold nugget—but it was once part of a watch charm.

The nugget, which Schwarzschild speculated might have been lost on the beach or might have washed up from the earth itself, was bought from the finder by Schwarzschild for $5.60.

The real owner, who is coming here to claim his nugget, wired that the gold piece was found back in the Virginia mountains many years ago. The Richmond jeweler said on reexamining the nugget, he found the loop by which the piece had been attached to a watch chain.

18-Acre Oyster Bed Of Steel Slag Is Laid

Annapolis, Md., July 30 (AP).—The oyster family's children have found a new lodging house this year in Eastern Bay at Mill Hill—2053 tons of steel mill slag—and the State Tidewater Fisheries Commission is hoping they like it.

The new growing medium was put down by the State because there was not a sufficient supply of oyster shells for planting purposes. The little oysters—called spat—attach themselves to objects as they grow.

State Shellfish Culturist Ralph Hammer said today the slag had been found to be a good medium in an experimental planting in 1944.

This is the first time the State has used it extensively. The slag comes from the Bethlehem Steel Mills at Sparrows Point and has been planted by hand and by pump into the Mill Hill area, covering 18.4 acres.

Hammer said 853 tons of slag measuring 1½ inches by ¾ and 1200 tons measuring 2½ by 1 were planted.

He said it was found that a pumping system could plant 50 tons an hour, the equivalent of 22 men working with shovels.

Besides the slag, 613,000 bushels of oyster shells were planted by the State in pursuance of its plan of planting and transferring seed.

Buses Substituted

Baltimore, July 30 (AP).—The Public Service Commission today authorized the Potomac Edison Co. to abondon its 6-mile electric line between Hagerstown and Williamsport and substitute bus service along U. S. 11 between the two Western Maryland municipalities.

A company spokesman said the buses would be ready to roll within a week.

Potomac Edison's application for abandonment was granted after a 45-minute hearing at which no opposition was expressed.

Involving in the changeover is a payment of $50,000 to the Chemical Bank and Trust Co. of New York, trustee for the company, to compensate Potomac Edison for rights-of-way held since 1897 and for franchises it has within the city limits of Hagerstown and Williamsport.

The State Roads Commission is paying $25,000 of the amount, Hagerstown $10,000, Washington County $12,500 and Williamsport $2,500.

U. of Md. Enrollment

Of the 8554 students who attended the University of Maryland during 1946-7, more than 5000 were from Maryland, according to Miss Alma H. Preinkert, registrar. Nevada alone was unrepresented in the student body, which had 1706 students from Washington, D. C., and 1214 from other States. Sixty-two students from 19 foreign countries also attended the school. Baltimore City and Prince Georges County topped the Maryland representation, with almost 3000 students between them.

City Hall Site Bought

Waynesboro, Va., July 30 (AP).—The purchase of the Wayne Inn property on Wayne ave. here as the site of a proposed new city hall-police-fire building was announced yesterday by City Council.

The building was bought from the W. H. Gardner estate for $50,000. The property fronts on three streets and the new city hall will front on Wayne ave. and the fire and police structure on Market st.

Fleming Hurt and Daley Craig have been selected as architects, and funds for the plans have already been received from the Federal Works Agency.

School Survey Asked

Leesburg, Va., July 30—A request to authorize a school survey in Loudoun County before a vote is taken on high school consolidation was made by L. P. Hickman, school board member from Lovettsville District, at a special session of the Loudoun County School Board.

The board, however, instructed Superintendent of Schools Emerick to consult first with the county board of supervisors to see if it would approve use of schools funds for the survey.

A final vote on Loudoun County high school consolidation has been set for August 19.

Driving Charges Dropped

Lynchburg, Va., July 30 (AP).—Trial Justice Lucian H. Shrader yesterday dismissed charges of reckless driving against Mrs. Lois Banton Dean, Route 2, Madison Heights, and State Trooper Capt. O. E. Snell, and fined George Morcom, Madison Heights, $5 for improper parking, but suspended the fine.

The charge against the State Trooper was brought at his own request by Trooper F. A. Bradley, who investigated an accident in which Snell's police car was involved July 17.

Chosen for Europe Tour

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 30.—Charles V. Sullivan, commander of Berkeley Post No. 14, American Legion, will be one of 500 delegates who will accompany National Commander Paul H. Griffith on a late-summer tour of Europe. Official announcement of the appointment came from State Adjutant C. A. Tesch.

City Service Elects 2

Stephens City, Va., July 30—Ralph Bauserman and Alfred Snapp have been elected to the board of directors of the Southern States Stephens City Service. Mrs. Virginia Bauserman and Mrs. Fred Gore are new members on the farm home advisory committee for the service.

Horse Show August 9

Harrisonburg, Va., July 30.—Horse lovers from all sections of the Shenandoah Valley will gather here Saturday, August 9, to attend the Harrisonburg Exchange Club horse show on the Harrisonburg High School athletic field.

The show, to be held at 2 p. m. and 8 p. m., will feature some of the finest horses in Virginia and surrounding States. There will be 21 classes with prizes and ribbons in each class. Harrisonburg, the county seat of Rockingham, was once the largest horse market in the East.

W. Va. Man Drowns

Charles Town, W. Va., July 30 (AP).—Daniel W. Hendricks 3d, 34, was drowned in the Potomac River at Rattling Springs near here last night, police reported.

The Shenandoah Junction merchant was believed to have been fishing in a motor boat, which overturned.

The fire department rescue squad worked all night with grappling hooks and floodlights, but the body has not yet been recovered.

Mr. Hendricks is survived by his widow and three children.

Cow Bears Triplets

Connellsville, Pa., July 30 (AP).—A 3-year-old Hereford cow, owned by Richard Gary of New Lexington, has borne triplet calves for the second time within a year, a rare occurrence. One of the calves in the second multiple birth died. All of the first three survived.

Mine Death Reported

Annapolis, Md., July 30 (AP).—One fatal and 16 non-fatal accidents in Maryland mines were reported today by Chief Mine Engineer Dr. John J. Rutledge.

He said a miner was killed by a fall of dynamite or middle rock June 27 at the Vindex No. 3 mine of the Johnstown Coal and Coke Co., Vindex, Garrett County, in the first such accident of the year.

During May, 16 claims for compensation were received at the State Industrial Accident Commission for non-fatal accidents in western Maryland coal mines.

Tar Paper Plant Burns

Edgewater, N. J., July 30 (AP).—Swiftly spreading flames virtually destroyed an asphalt products plant early today before firemen brought the blaze under control within an hour and a half.

The plant, a two-story structure used for the manufacture of tar paper by the Barrett Company, was described as an almost total loss. The blaze was attributed to spontaneous combustion.

Cow Sale Head Named

Winchester, Va., July 30.—I. Fred Stine has been named sales manager for the seventh annual northern Virginia feeder calf sale to be held here October 16-17. J. W. Olcott of Berryville is assistant sales manager.

In addition to Stine and Olcott, members of the sale committee include Hugh Brill and John Wolfe, Frederick County; David Donovan and Julian Everly, Clarke County; Lem Sutphin, J. H. Cunningham and F. W. Carter, Fauquier County; William Cockerill and Paul Adams, Loudoun County, and Raymond I. Hoover, Shenandoah County.

Five hundred Angus, Hereford and Shorthorn steer and heifer calves are expected to be consigned for the sale. The first day will be confined to grading and penning the calves, the sale proper beginning at 1 p. m., October 17, Stine said.

1000 at Assembly

Harrisonburg, Va., July 30 (AP).—A capacity crowd of 1000 is in attendance at the thirty-ninth Virginia Baptist Summer Assembly at Massanetta Springs this week, with a full daily program planned to begin daily at 8:30 a. m.

Dr. W. H. Tribble of Louisville, Ky., is the first morning speaker and his series is on "The Bible and the Holy Spirit."

Garage-Stables Lauded

Hagerstown, Md., July 30.—City Sanitary Inspector J. P. Shenk says private garages near the local race track that are being temporarily used for stables are "cleaner than many homes I have seen here."

Shenks' investigation followed a petition of about a dozen residents near the track, who said use of private garages for horses created an insanitary condition.

Horse owners were forced to rent garages because of the shortage at the fairground, where races are scheduled to begin next week.

Rotary Queen Picked

Herndon, Va., July 30.—Miss Inez Ankers of Forestville was crowned queen of the Herndon Rotary carnival for receiving the most votes in a contest held by the club. She was presented with a wrist watch. Second-place winner was Miss Mary Harrison of Floris.

$1,725,000 Soil Fund

By The Associated Press.

Joseph H. Blandford, head of the Production and Marketing Administration, announced approximately $1,725,000 in soil conservation payments would be available in Maryland this year as part of a Nation-wide program totaling 265 million dollars.

Blandford said the funds were largely for the development of pasture lands by planting cover crops on fields that otherwise would be left fallow.

He added that there was insufficient pasture land in Maryland at present and that "only by expanding this acreage can growers be expetced to add to their flocks and herds."

In a District Building Hallway . . .

The Washington Post

Betty L. Drake, of 4327 18th st. n., Arlington, Va., buys a bouquet from Lawrence O. Mallery, 83, retired city employe, who sells flowers in the District Building. Says Malery, "It keeps me out of mischief"

Chiropractor Sentenced for Malpractice

A chiropractor who, witnesses said, took $1340 to treat a woman who subsequently died of cancer was given the maximum sentence yesterday for practicing medicine here without a license.

He is Bernard Rubin, 68, of 1644 Columbia rd. nw. He was sentenced by Judge Ellen K. Raedy of Municipal Court to pay a $100 fine and serve 90 days in jail. However, he was freed under $500 bond pending appeal.

According to Samuel Swiggitt, 701 Nicholson st. nw., his wife Grace, 75, engaged Rubin to treat her last winter. Rubin, according to Swiggitt, said he needed the money primarily to buy a rare drug that was imported from India.

Rubin, who sometimes is called "professor," denied this, saying he merely massaged Mrs. Swiggitt who died on June 8.

Detective Sergt. William Taylor produced records showing that Rubin had been charged with other violations of the Healing Practice Arts Act on three previous occasions.

Retired Auditor Gives District Building Color

An 83-year-old retiredd city employe, who raises flowers because "it keeps me out of mischief," is adding a touch of floral color to District Building desks this summer.

Several mornings each week, Lawrence O. Mallery leaves his home on Good Luck rd. near Lanham, Md., with an auto full of flowers for the District Building.

Mallery, who worked in the District audditor's office for 18 years prior to his retirement in 1934, has no trouble finding his way around. He usually completes delivery to eager secretaries and clerks by noon.

Began When A Boy

"I began taking an interest in flowers when I was a small boy," he recalls. "I used to help my mother tend her flower beds in Milford, Del."

His first "professional' experience with growing things came at the age of 13, however, when he got a job planting tree shoots at a nursery near Milford.

"The owner never told you how much he'd pay when he hired you," Mallery explains. "He'd come out and watch you work and then set the pay. Another fellow and I worked hard. We got $1 a day. The others ranged from 50 to 75 cents. I was certainly proud."

He entered the real estate business with his brother, Allen W. Mallery, and was instrumental in the early development of the Kenilworth section.

Rough on Beetles

Mallery lives with his wife, Annabelle; his son and daughter-in-law, and nine grandchildren on the Lanham farm. His son, L. Winship Mallery, drives him to the District Building for the day's flower vending. He goes home alone by bus.

Thousands of Japanese beetles on some of his flower beds give him trouble. "But they don't bother the gladiolas much," he says. "I did find three of them on a gladiola but I got rid of them fast."

Does he use DDT? "No, I just pinch 'em—don't give 'em a chance," he explains, his tanned face breaking into a smile.

Primary Judges Named

Herndon, Va., July 30.—Russell A. Flynn and Edgar E. Gillette have been appointed judges for the August 5 primary to be held in the Herndon Municipal Building. Miss Lulah Ferguson will serve as clerk and Richard Kohlivey as registrar.

Teacher Pleads Guilt in Income Tax Evasion

Ernest C. Rick, 58-year-old school teacher, pleaded guilty yesterday to filing false nad fradulent District income tax returns during the years 1942, 1943 and 1944.

At the same time, the United States Attorney's office nolle prossed a similar charge against Rick's wife, Mabel, 55. The Ricks resided at 1335 Masscahusetts ave. se.

Maximum penalty for the offense is a $10,000 fine and a year in jail. Sentencnig was deferred in Municipal Court pending a report of the probation officer. Assistant United States Attorney John Lane prosecuted the case.

According to the charges, the total income tax owed by Rick is $281. The United States Court of Appeals recently ruled against Rick, who contended that the corporation counsel, rather than the United States attorney, was empowered to prosecute.

Rick teaches at Stuart Junior High. Mrs. Rick is a teacher at Hine Junior High. They are now on leave of absence.

'Freedom' Is Topic

Williamsburg, Va., July 30 (AP).—An encroachment upon one free dom is "an encroachment upon all," A. D. Willard, jr., executive vice president of the National Association of Broadcasters, said in speaking at "Freedom of Speech" night at "The Common Glory" performance at the Lake Matoaka Amphitheater last night8.

Willard declared that "without a free radio we will not have for long a free press," and "without that free press, we would not survive long as a democracy."

Referring to the regulations and licensing of broadcasting by an executive commission, Willard declared "The control that should be exercised over American broadcasting to make it the best broadcasting possible is in the hands of the listener, who will select the good and reject the bad. It will remain there."

Funeral Rites Set Today for R. H. Elsworth

Funeral services for Ralph Henry Elsworth, 75, a United States Department of Agriculture employe for 25 years, will be held today at 2 p. m. at the Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Mr. Elsworth, who was chief of the historical and statistical division of the cooperative research and service division of the Farm Credit Administration prior to his retirement in 1943, died July 26 in Regina, Saskatchewan, Canada. His former Washington address was 1924 Lawrence st. ne.

2 Policemen Charged in Jail Scuffle Death

Salisbury, Md., —uly 30 (AP).—Two police officers were charged with manslaughter today as the result of a fight at the county jail here Saturday night with a man who had been arrested for drunken driving.

Milton H. Jones, 31-year-old automobile dealer and truck-line operator, died in Peninsula General Hospital after the ruckus.

Wimcomico County State's Attorney Rex A. Taylor preferred the manslaughter charges against John J. Harbaugh, 29-year-old Maryland State Trooper, and John W. Turner, 62-year-old one-armed turnkey at the jail.

Taylor said his investigation showed Harbaugh had ample ground for arresting Jones on a road near town, but that how Jones was treated and what happened after the arrest was a question to be decided by a jury.

Peoples' Court Judge Carl L. Walter issued the warrants. He set a preliminary hearing for 9 a. m. Friday and announced he would countenance a postponement of no more than two days.

Taylor pointed out the defendants may elect to waive a preliminary hearings and let their case go direct to the grand jury, which meets the second Monday in September.

The State's attorney started investigating immediately after Jones' death and said he learned Jones swung on Harbaugh as the trooper was lighting a cigarette. They were in the elevator ascending to the penthouse jail atop Wicomico County's courthouse, and Turner operated the lift.

Taylor said witnesses quoted Jones as saying he would "get" the trooper when they arrived at the jail and another fight broke out once they had completed the elevator trip.

Jones was taken to the hospital and died. Harbaugh was treated there for minor injuries and discharged.

Taylor preferred the charges against the two officers after a conference with Judge Walter and attorneys engaged by the widow.

The two officers were not placed under arrest immediately, but Judge Walter set bail at $10,000 each.

Lieut W. H. Weber, field force commander of State troopers announced Harbaugh's suspension from the force "without prejudice" and said he understood several persons had agreed to supply bond.

"If he is found innocent, he will be reinstated," Weber said.

If bail is not forthcoming from private sources, Weber said, it will be supplied from the State Police welfare fund, which has been built up from contributions by troopers.

Jones' funeral was held at his home this afternoon.

Children on Guam Stunted by Jap Rule

Guam, July 30 (AP).—The Japanese occupation startingly retarded the physical development of Guam's children, says a Stanford University scientist who is helping the Navy plan a healthier future for them.

"There is no question that these young children show the results of their years under the Japanese," said Dr. William Walter Gurelich, who is an anatomist.

"Fear and poor diet held them back. What child could get the most out of his food when he was scared half to death?"

Mrs. Zula Thompson Wells

Mrs. Zula Thompson Wells, wife of the late Ira K. Wells, judge of the United States District Court for Puerto Rico, died Saturday in St. Petersburg, Fla., according to word received here last night.

Mrs. Wells, 77, and her husband lived in Washington in the early 1920s when he was an assistant attorney general during the Harding and Coolidge administrations. He was subsequently appointed United States District Attorney of Puerto Rico and a few years later District Judge. He died in 1934.

Judge Wells served as Judge Advocate of the Canal Zone, with the rank of major, during World War I.

Mrs. Wells, a native of Seneca, Kan., leaves two daughters, Mrs. Loretta Stutz of Chicago, and Mrs. Dora Maloney of Youngstown, Ohio; two sisters, Mrs. Lucy Schenk of Seneca and St. Petersburg, and Mrs. Alda Peters of Larchmont, N. Y., and St. Petersburg, and a brother, Nathan B. Thompson, of Topeka, Kan.

Funeral services will be held in the Fort Myer Chapel at 3 p. m. tomorrow, with burial in Arlington National Cemetery.

Perfect Man Assembled By Models

NEW YORK, July 30 (U.P.).—A composite "perfect man," dreamed up by the models for Pic Magazine included the best features of 18 men from widely different walks of life.

This mountain of masculine magnificence would have the following attributes:

The late President Franklin D. Roosevelt's "resolute" jaw; General Dwight D. Eisenhower's "military bearing," the shoulders of Army football ace Glenn Davis.

He'd also be equipped with Gary Cooper's "ease of posture;" Gregory Peck's "crooked, imperfect kissable" smile; Cary Grant's deeply cleft chin.

The perfect man would have Tyrone Power's teeth, Robert Taylor's "classic" nose, Robert Mitchum's "quizzical but cute" eyebrows, the "small, intelligent ears" of Dana Andrews, and Clark Gable's "devilish" dimples.

Leopold Stokowski would contribute the hands to this paragon, Ronald Colman would loan him his mustache, Jimmy Stewart would provide the eyes, Guy Madison the hair, George Montgomery the neck, and Sterling Hayden would give his "perfect torso."

The perfect man would stand on Van Johnson's legs.

As for how this ideal would handle the ladies, the models hoped he'd do it in the Humphrey Bogart fashion. "It's scary," they confessed, "but we love it."

Whee-ee! What We Women Wear for Hats!!

WHAT do women talk about when they meet for tea in the Mayflower Lounge? Why hats, of course. What else in these hectic days when the shape of things we wear on our heads is looming so large before us?

Sometimes the talk goes to our heads, as in the case of these three lassies, who met for a quiet chat and a cup of tea in the lounge. Along came a pal, 21-year-old Philip Robertson, Washington's youngest hat designer, with an armload of his latest creations. The girls gasped, grabbed, gabbed. On went the chapeaux—the very newest and latest.

Dark and handsome Jocelyn Freer, left, poses in a "Merry Widow" teatime hat of black straw. Black lace ruffles fall over the wide brim where huge red roses nestle. A black and aqua parakeet captures the fancy of tall, blonde Martha-Best Yorke, center, niece of the Secretary of War and Mrs. Kenneth C. Royall. The bird sweeps down on either side of the black felt brim, which flares high and wide in accordance with the new fashion rules.

Whee—ee! It's one of the new giant, wrapped-crown styles for pretty Anne Revercomb, right, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Chapman Revercomb of West Virginia. This one is of shimmering aqua satin. And, believe it or not, it's as light as a feather.—PEGGY PRESTON.

Strike Threatens Paris Stylists

Paris, July 30 (U.P.).—Fashion houses here, scheduled to begin showing their winter collections August 5, were threatened tonight with bankruptcy by a possible strike of garment workers.

Seamstresses, who often enter fashion houses at the age of 13 and earn 58 francs per hour (about 50 cents) after 10 years experience, said they will strike Friday for a 10-franc an hour wage increase.

The newspaper France Soir, quoted Pierre Gaumone-Lanvin head of the union of fashion houses, as saying if demands of the garment workers are met the whole fashion industry will be threatened.

"All Paris fashion houses are running at a loss now. If we brought the price of dresses up nobody would buy. If this strike is not settled amicably our whole industry is at stake."

The garment union and owners are now meeting in an attempt to compromise.

Diet Diary Shows Way Of All Flesh

By Ida Jean Kain

DID you ever keep a diet diary?

It's very enlightening. Just for fun, mark down everything eaten and keep a record for three and a half days. Don't diet, or try to go light on any favorite food, just eat as usual, and keep score.

And, of course, chalk up the in-between-meal goodies. Oh not that they amount to anything, but don't forget to put down the tea calories . . . those beaten biscuits with the ham were really just a mouthful, but mark them down, just to keep the record straight. And the two cupcakes, just a couple of bites apiece. And the whole pecans, sandwiched together with cream cheese . . . mmm, delicious—must have had a drop of lemon in the filling. But you really didn't eat much dinner. Or take much of a snack before retiring. Just jot it down.

Score Tells Story

I SUGGESTED this plan to one would-be-slimmer friend who complained that she couldn't lose, no matter how hard she struggled to keep the calories curbed. To her complete amazement, the calorie score on one day added up to 3200 calories. She could hardly believe it. The proof was on the scales, too.

And here's a novel trick which helps to visualize good food into solid fat. It's not the first helping of food that adds weight, it's the second. A doctor friend suggested to an overweight patient who seemed puzzled as to why she didn't lose, that she take a first helping, and then take the second helping on another plate, at the same time.

The old way of cleaning up the plate, then refilling makes for overweight because with the first helping out of sight, it doesn't seem unreasonable to have another helping. But viewed together, it's plain to see that it's a lot of food.

Don't Cheat Self

BACK to the calories. If you really mean business, keep the calorie score for three and a half days, then double the figure, to get a rough estimate of the number consumed in one week. Your reducing calories should be around 1200 per day . . . which is about 1200 less than you ordinarily use. 1200 X 7 equals 8400 calories for the week. That represents your calorie deficit . . . which means you draw on stored fat for that number.

Well, it takes approximately 4000 calories under your requirements to subtract a pound. So on 1200 calories a day you can lose two pounds a week. By the way, the average reducing diet for a man is 1500 to 1800 calories a day.

Once-Fine Lad, 23, Drops Ambitious Plans, Turns to Loafing and Drinking, Since His Secret Bride Refuses to Become a Real Wife

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Three years ago, when 17, I met Jeff, then 20,—a wonderful person, completely honest, straightforward, unselfish and very understanding. He soon fell in love with me and I led him to believe I loved him, too.

After a whirlwind romance we were married secretly two months later, three days before he sailed overseas. I liked him more than I thought it possible to like a boy and was happy every minute with him, but I didn't love him (though he didn't know that) and the marriage was never consummated.

All he asked was that I wait for him. I was to save his allotment checks and on his return we were to be married again in my church, have a real honeymoon and settle in his home town where he would finish his education. It didn't turn out that way.

Girl Frivoled Away His Money

I got his checks, via a confidante, but always found some use for them, saving nothing. I thought it best to tell Jeff, whose answer was just what I had expected. "That's all right, darling; you're my wife and the money is yours." In the meantime I was going out freely—as we had agreed—and none of my beaux knew I was married.

After a year my parents found out and started annulment proceedings, which were delayed due to insufficient grounds. Jeff was gone 21 months. On his return my family approved of him at first sight and urged me to give the marriage a trial, but I met him with a cold shoulder and sharp tongue. I told him I wasn't ready to be his wife.

I knew I was breaking his heart but I sent him away. Then I had a wire, saying he was to be operated on for a war injury and asking me to come. I caught the next plane and stayed two months, until his release from the hospital, —then I left for home, as summer fun was calling.

Girl Begins To Take Stock

HIS FAMILY liked me, I'm sure; and in leaving I lied that I expected to be back in a month. When I didn't return, his mother wrote me a harsh letter—for which I don't blame her—telling me either to come back and be his wife or leave him alone forever . . . He didn't go back to college.

He is loafing, drinking and running around with a crowd that does the same. His parents are heart-broken at the change in him and blame me. I doubt that they would speak to me if I went back. I'll soon be 21 and my ideas of life and fun are changing. I'm always comparing other fellows to Jeff and as yet I've found none to equal him.

What I've done to him will always be with me. I'll always wonder if I could have been happily married to him, and if I could still make him happy. I know he'd be the gladdest guy on earth if I would go back, but I still have this doubt in my mind as to whether I'd be satisfied or content to become his wife in every way. The annulment comes up again in October. Please advise. A. D.

Man Engineered His Frustration

DEAR A. D.: To make room for reply, I've had to discard three-fourths of your letter. This is a sad story, but obviously you never were Juliet to Jeff's Romeo. As you say, you've never loved him. Rather you've been frivolous, greedy and—it seems—frigidly self centered in exploiting his dazzled devotion.

The product of "very strict" upbringing, you were "more than frightened at the thought of marriage" when Jeff proposed—and told him so. However, his dogged pleading prevailed and you agreed to become his bride in name only; but your dread of wifehood and the full obligations thereof waxed stronger during his absence.

These aspects of the case indicate: 1. That Jeff must acknowledge some responsibility for the subsequent frustrating deal he's got, since in effect he high-pressured you into marriage when your inclinations were tensely opposed.

Girl's Upbringing Induced Frigidity

2. THAT unconsciously you are rigidly opposed to physical consummation of love, doubtless due to a strict upbringing which stressed the protective importance of feminine "virtue" in the narrow sense, without imparting positive illuminating guidance concerning human feelings which would have made you wisely self governing yet withal free to experience normal emotions in appropriate relationship.

Point 2 would explain why you married Jeff tentatively, on the basis of great liking but with adamant defensive reservations, and continued a rudderless quest for emotional fulfillment by playing the field, — a performance which brings no satisfaction, but rather increasing self contempt, uncertainty and dismay. And that's to be expected: the inevitable pay-off for unconscious frigidity as a major nebulous neurotic trend.

As matters stand, I think you and Jeff have hopelessly muffed any possibilities you ever had of being happily married. Even assuming that at his best he was potentially the perfect husband for you, what you've "done to him," or, more precisely, his latterday weakling reaction to the consequences of his early desperate impetuosity—which in its way was self-serving, too,—spells death to "fine feeling" between you, I think. Both of you need psychiatric help to get your bearings for a poised integrated "go" at real happiness. M. H.

Be Extra Careful Preparing Baby's Formula in Summer

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

The doctor, presumably, will dictate the contents of the baby's milk formula, but it remains for the mother to put it together in a manner which makes it fit for her baby to take.

First of all, she must be sure of her milk supply. That is no small consideration in hot weather. If she feels it of dubious freshness or cleanliness, she would do well to use canned or powdered milk, which is stable in all climates.

Standing Milk Sours

If the milk is good, she must insure that it will stay that way. This means it must not be left standing on the hot or sunny doorstep for hours after delivery. Heat and sunlight can make it a very different product from the one intended.

The bottles should be washed well before placed in the icebox in the coldest spot, to be left there until ready to mix into the formula.

All the utensils used to mix the baby's food should be washed well with soap and water, boiled or well-rinsed with boiling water and preferably used for this one purpose.

The pitcher used to mix the milk, water and sugar, the glass measuring beaker, the spoons, the strainer, should be just as clean as the bottles and nipples, if the product mixed in them is to be good.

Sterilize Bottles

As the formula is prepared for the 24-hour period and not bottle by bottle, empty and rinse the nursing bottles as used. Put them aside and wash them all well at the same time. Then they can be put in the electric sterilizer, or the large pan of cold water in which they will be brought to a boil and boiled for 10 minutes. Better put some vinegar in this water or the bottles will grow very cloudy from so much boiling.

Lift out the hot bottles, drain and put on a clean towel and cover with another. Sterilize the nipples by dipping them in and out of the boiling water and once or twice a week boil them in a small pan with some salt in the water.

After the bottles are filled, the contents should be cooled by setting them in a pan of cold water and running cold water around them. Keep the filled bottles covered, never open to odors or bacteria present in the air. Clean hands for the mother plus clean milk and utensils, all add up to insure a good formula which will do its part to nourish the baby.

Fill Hollow Back With Extra Belting

If your skirts droop at the back, and you've tried and tried to figure a way to compensate for the hollow back you have, then here's the good word on how to remedy the situation.

Local sewing center experts suggest taking an extra 9-inch length of belting and pinning it firmly to the center of the back of your skirt belting. Baste the belting toward the side seams, gradually tapering the double piece away till it is flush with the skirt belt. Machine-stitch the two pieces together at the edge and cut away the surplus belting. Your hollow back seems no longer hollow, and your skirt hangs beautifully.

Playtime Hairdos

THE BIG FOUR . . . for vacations. Arranged from same basic hairstyle.

By Betty Clarke

Well-groomed girls still are wearing their hair shoulder length. Models, cafe society girls and Hollywood stars, with few exceptions, have adopted this medium-length bob because it is perfect for vacations—is adaptable to a variety of hair arrangements, is cool for summer and easily manageable.

You can wear any of the four popular summer coiffures. Here's the way to arrange them:

Hair parted in the middle or on the side is slicked back to the nape of the neck and anchored with one of the new important-looking though inexpensive silver or gold-plated barrettes; a big velvet bow or a hair ribbon. This hairdo is popular for business, afternoon parties and for sports.

Another variation is accomplished by combing the hair back to the nape of the neck, securing it with a rubber band. Then two large curls are made with the back hair. A barrette or ribbon is fastened over the rubber band after the curls have been made. This is a nice dress-up-quick hairdo after a day in the country with your hair flying in the breeze.

Popular for the beach again this year, and it can be accomplished quickly with this shoulder-length hair, is the around-the-head braid. Or you can cross two braids across the top of your head or wear pigtails.

Senators' Ladies Attend
Brewster Quiz Is Cool, Free And Fascinating

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

NOW THAT we're in for a siege of senatorial investigations (about 39 are on the agenda) it might be interesting to describe the general mise en scene. Senator Brewster's War Investigating Committee is holding its show in Room 318 of the Senate Office Building.

Room 318 is positively ballroomy with marble lined walls, four jumbo crystal chandeliers and a crimson carpet. Air cooling takes the curse off twin Klieg lights which, for the benefit of newsreel cameramen, pour down on the unfortunate witness and blind the hundreds or more spectators seated on caned chairs.

Witnesses and counselors face the Senators and their counselors across a long table. Both investigator and investigatee question and reply through hand microphone so that even the tiniest whisper is importantly magnified. Behind the table are several rows of seats crammed with reserve witnesses, legal assistants, and such.

At most sessions three decorative ladies sit among the privileged. First, Mrs. Nicholas Longsworth, President Theodore Roosevelt's brilliant daughter; second, lovely, blond Mrs. Brien McMahon; third, Mrs. Claude Pepper (wives, respectively, of the Connecticut and Florida Senators).

Mrs. McMahon wore a cartwheel hat of natural straw wreathed with poppies. Mildred Pepper sported a turned-off-the-face number of navy milan. Mrs. Longworth had on the vastly becoming model she's had copied in every conceivable material.

Scattered through the audience are generals, socialites, odd-looking characters and many humble taxpayers such as you and me. It's free, anyone can get into Room 318, and it's a fascinating show.

Mrs. Woodhouses Looking 1948

ONE OF THE shrewdest, yet most unassuming women about Washington these days is former Connecticut Congresswoman Chase Going Woodhouse. She's small, precise, white-haired, wears pince-nez glasses and has a perfect cupid-bow mouth. Officially, Mrs. Woodhouse is dubbed with the fullsome title of Executive Director of the National Democratic Party's Women's Division. This job keeps her on the jump cross-country, making friends and influencing people.

For spare moments, efficient Mrs. Woodhouse has half a dozen sidelines. She's bought a brace of Georgetown houses, done them over and furnished them to a queen's taste, then rented them. Up near New London she's taken to serious farming, snatching neighboring acreage as fast as she can get it. Her business acumen shows why she was a good bet as member of the House's important Banking and Currency Committee.

Meanwhile, the former professor of Economics at Smith College is mending her political fences with professional finesse. Come 1948 or 1950, Mrs. Woodhouse is sure to stage a political comeback. Mrs. Woodhouse's husband, incidentally, is a Professor of Political Science at the University of North Carolina.

Land of Cheese and Chocolate Bars

THE JOHN CARTER VINCENTS are packing up, going north before they sail September 10 for Europe. Mr. Vincent, the State Department's Far Eastern expert, has been appointed minister to the happy land of cheese and chocolate bars—Switzerland. Leland Harrison, our minister in Berne during the war, is out of foreign service for good. A victim of the State Department's latest purge, Mr. Harrison, they say, was given his conge without a snitch of warning.

One of the fashionable coterie of diplomats who, in their bachelor days, centered their activities around the small "club" in H street, Leland has served over the globe from Uruguay to Romania. His witty, Philadelphia-born wife, Nancy, has left Switzerland and is touring Sweden with one of their daughters.

Everyone hopes, that come autumn, the Harrisons will be esconced permanently in their S street house—and giving even more than their usual quota of pleasant parties.

'Are Americans Polygamous?'

ENLIVENING many of the Capital's summery entertainments is Author David Cohn, Mississippi's gift to blase hostesses. Mr. Cohn, a bachelor whose pursuit of the fair sex is utterly courtly, has written a number of best sellers, the best known being "Love in America."

Right now we are very much afraid soft-spoken David has stepped off the deep end. For his newest effort, currently appearing in the staid Atlantic Monthly, is provocatively titled:

"Are Americans Polygamous?"

It wouldn't be fair to disclose the trend of Mr. Cohn's thesis but we can guarantee that his material is authentic. At least some of his observations were made in Washington's most distinguished salons!

Dawsons' Policy Is Modesty

By Marie McNair

MR. AND MRS. William Dawson seem to share a passion for anonymity. The first United States Ambassador to the Pan American Union has held any number of important diplomatic posts, yet after diligent research, only the barest facts about Mr. Dawson's career turned up.

Mrs. Dawson belongs to the school of thought that your name should appear only twice in the public print—when you're born and when you die.

"I shine strictly by reflected glory," she said when I talked with her yesterday. But her becoming modesty was overcome long enough for her to tell me that she has a grown son, Edward, whose wife and three little girls are now visiting the junior Mrs. Dawson's home in Kentucky.

Kept Apartment

Mrs. Dawson has kept her apartment at the Wyoming even though she's seen little of her husband in the last year. Her husband served as political adviser to the American United Nations Assembly delegation in New York for three months last fall. But when he returned for the April and May sessions Mrs. Dawson went with him. She found the meetings intensely interesting and wouldn't have missed them for the world.

Mr. Dawson began his foreign service career about 40 years ago. In 1939 he was appointed United States Ambassador to Panama and two years later went to Uruguay with the same rank.

PRETTY Alwilda Ferris, daughter of Capt. Floyd F. Ferris, USN, and Mrs. Ferris, has a birthday today, and this evening she'll celebrate the event at a dinner and dance at the Army and Navy Club.

She's asked Miss Patricia Rosicki and her fiance, George L. West, jr., to be her guests and others are Miss Constance O'Brien, Miss Betty Mullen, Miss Joan Mullen, Lieut. Comdr. Pierson M. Hall, USNR, Lieut. William Lucas, Lieut. (j.g.) Richard Anderson, USN, and Howard Ennis.

TOWN TOPICS:

The new Portuguese Ambassador, Pedro Teotonio Pereira, a bachelor and said to be very rich, flew to New York from Rio de Janeiro on Tuesday and was met at the airport by the retiring Ambassador, Dr. Joao Antonio de Bianchi. The Bianchis, who left Washington last week will board the plane for Lisbon today. Senor Pereira is expected in Washington tomorrow or Saturday, and he'll have to decide whether or not to take over the Bianchis' apartment at Wardman Park until the new embassy on Kalorama rd. is ready for occupancy.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Biffle will be leaving next week for Canada for a 10-day holiday. Les Biffle, something of an angler, is looking forward to spending all of the 10 days fishing. The Biffles will let their old friends, Mr. and Mrs. Haskin Damon of Chicago, guide them to the camp at White Fish Bay, off the tip o Michigan, for it's foreign ground to them.

And—off to spend the month of August, her longest vacation in eight years, is Mrs. Mitchell Palmer. She's going to visit Mrs. Francis P. Garvan at her summer home in the Adirondacks, Camp Kill Kare at Raquette Lake, N. Y.

She Sells Ceramics
Mrs. Rochester Cashed in on Hobby

By Genevieve Reynolds

If you're in the summer doldrums with time hanging heavily on your hands, start a hobby. Besides being fun, the venture might even turn into a profitable career.

That's exactly what occurred when Mrs. Harry A. Rochester, wife of Captain Rochester, USNR, took up ceramics about a year ago to relieve boredom. She began making pottery, jewelry in varied and exquisite designs. Friends admired her original cigarette boxes, ash trays, vases, paper weights. The more she worked, the more intrigued she became with experimentating with new designs, and the more and more gifts she made to her friends, who admired the original trinkets.

Generosity Too Costly

Eventually, Mary found that in order to replenish materials, she would have to start charging a small price. Now the ceramic articles are selling faster than she can design them.

She models the dishes, jewelry in clay, bakes and glazes them in a kiln, which she keeps hidden behind a bamboo screen in one corner of her apartment at 4801 Connecticut ave.

It all began while the Captain was overseas helping to fight the war in the Pacific. Plunging into volunteer war work, she was one of the original group who organized the Washington Office of Civilian Defense. She organized and headed the Placement Department of Volunteers, assigning nurses aides and USO hostesses. She managed the UNRRA warehouse during the clothing drive. In addition, she put in several hours each week with Navy Relief and other organizations. When the war ended not content to idle away time on bridge and gossip, she studied ceramics.

Early Lessons

As a child she spent many summers on a California ranch, and while there learned her elementary pottery making lessons from the ranch Indians.

Mrs. Rochester was educated in convents in Spain, Switzerland and France, and even there took a subconscious interest in the art.

Later when she traveled in the Orient and South America, she made mental notes of the china and pottery making methods of the various coountries. But, it was not until years later that her interest in a hobby was converted to a profitable business.

Army Corps Marks Fifth Anniversary

A picnic at Fort Hunt, Va., last Sunday celebrated the fifth "birthday" of the Transportation Corps. The event was sponsored by the Transportation Corps Officers' Wives Club, and nearly 200 persons attended. There was swimming and volley ball and a program of entertainment.

Brig. Gen. Paul F. Yount's "Chops" softball team defeated Col. H. T. Miller's "Chads" by an unannounced score, and after supper several selections were sung by Mrs. Mark H. Johnson, wife of Colonel Johnson.

The picnic was under the chairmanship of Maj. and Mrs. H. C. Hildeton.

Stay-at-Home Diplomats Attend Concert

Who's left in Washington could be determined last evening at the Concert of the Americans, held at the Pan American Union. The United States Navy Band played in a setting of flowering shrubs by the cool side of a blue tiled pool. Lieut. Comdr. Charles Brendler conducted and Alvaro Solani, Chilean tenor, was guest artist.

The two hundredth concert of music by Latin American composers, it was well attended by diplomats and officials and their wives. The Ambassador of Honduras and Senora de Caceres were Costa Rica and Senora de Gutierrez. Also, the Ambassador of Cuba and Senora de Belt, the Ambassador of Columbia to the Pan American Union and Senora de Rocha, the Ambassador of Brazil to the Pan American Union and Mme. Muniz, the Soviet Ambassador and Mme. Novikov, the Ambassador of Argentina and Senora de Ivanissevich, and the Ambassador of Australia and Mrs. Makin.

Still others included the Ambassador of India, Asaf Ali, the Ambassador of Siam and Princess Wan Waithayakon, the Minister of Iceland and Mme. Thor Thors, Senator Arthur Capper, Senator Theodore Francis Green, Representative Sol Bloom, Representative and Mrs. William M. Colmer, Representative and Mrs. Roy O. Woodruff, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Glenn B. Davis, Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg and Mrs. William Dawson.

Miss LaRue Married

The Rev. and Mrs. William E. LaRue of Glendale, Calif., formerly of Washington, announce the marriage of their daughter, Jeanne, to Earl Walmsley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Walmsley of Los Angeles, which took place on July 19, at Riverside, Calif.

Embassy Reception

A reception will be held at the Norwegian Embassy Sunday afternoon on the occasion of the seventy-fifth birthday anniversary of King Haakon VII. Guests will include members of the embassy and representatives of the Norwegian colony in Washington.

Evelyn Rapee Becomes Bride Of Mr. Murphy

Miss Evelyn Margaret Rapee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Joseph Rapee of Silver Spring, Md., was married on July 26 to William Joseph Murphy, jr., son of Mrs. W. J. Murphy of Washington, and the late Mr. Murphy.

The Rev. D. White performed the ceremony in St. Luke's Lutheran Church in Silver Spring and a reception followed at Hayden Farms.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore white marquisette and satin with a headdress of pink and white carnations matching her bouquet. Miss Alice Virginia Murphy, maid of honor, was costumed in pink marquisette with a headdress and bouquet of blue carnations.

Rudolph Gingle, jr., was best man and ushers were Edward Estes and Ralph Weaver.

Mrs. Murphy attended William and Mary College and George Washington University. Her husband attended Benjamin Franklin College and Harvard University.

Fitzpatricks Baby Baptised At Holy Trinity

The daughter of Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. John P. Fitzpatrick was christened Elizabeth Diane on her six months' birthday anniversary. The ceremony took place Tuesday in Holy Trinity Church at 5 o'clock. Father Lawrence Kelly officiated, and a small reception followed at the home of the baby's grandparents, Vice Admiral and Mrs. Forrest P. Sherman.

The baby wore a long white christening robe that had been in her father's family for 100 years. A cake was cut in her honor after the ceremony, and toasts were made in champagne.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Miles, daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Arthur Clark Miles, is the baby's godmother, and Henry Watts is godfather.

Mrs. H. M. Martin, great aunt of the baby and sister of Mrs. Sherman, who was on hand for the christening, left yesterday morning by motor for California. Her son, David Martin, accompanied her and took along two guests, Paul Cajigas and Miss Mary Zimmerman.

Sometime within the next two months the Fitzpatricks will leave for Madrid, Spain, where Commander Fitzpatrick will be stationed as assistant naval attache. One-time assistant naval attache at Rio de Janeiro, the commander has lately served as head of the South American Section of Naval Intelligence. Capt. Prescott Mercer will be naval attache at Madrid, and he, too, will leave for Spain with Mrs. Mercer in the near future.

Returning to Capital

Miss Jessie R. Blane who has been spending several weeks in Mexico on a vacation, will return to Washington next week.

At York Harbor

Mrs. E. R. Henning, wife of Capt. Henning, USN, retired, is spending the summer at York Harbor, Me., at the Marshall House.

Ask Anne — Your Questions on Homemaking

When we purchased our home a few years ago, I noticed flying ants hatching out in the basement. The next year they had gotten to the kitchen, where they multiplied in great numbers. Last year and this year, they have infested a bedroom upstairs. What are they and what do they eat? What can I do to get rid of them?
DISTRESSED READER

Winged ants may belong to any one of many species. They are the young male and female ants which develop wings during the mating season. The best way to get rid of them is to find their nests and introduce poison. Usually a trailing parade of ants will lead you to the nest. If it's in the woodwork, inject a tablespoon of orthodichlorobenzine (purchased in wholesale drug supply houses) into the small openings made by the ants, using a small syringe. Then close the opening with plastic wood or putty. This chemical is an irritant and must be used with care. The skin and eyes should be protected from contact.

If the colonies cannot be located, one of the following treatments may prove effective: a residual spray of 5 per cent DDT solution, applied in places where ants may run or hide; sodium fluoride powder, dusted where ants are seen crawling; preparations containing "chlordane," a new insecticide, ant baits containing arsenic.

Be careful in using sodium fluoride and ant baits as they are poisonous to children, dogs and cats. Take precautions with chlordane preparations also, as their effect on animals and children has not been fully tested.

(1) What can I do to remove rust that has formed where the cap screws onto the spinner of my washing machine? (2) How can I remove stains from my waffle iron? (3) What is the most effective way to clean the aluminum divider in my pressure cooker? It is stained almost black from cooking food in it. I tried to remove the stains with several household cleansers with no results. F. S.

(1) A special rust removing cleanser is on sale in the household section of local department stores. This will take the rust off your washing machine, but you will have to repeat the treatment occasionally. The appearance of rust means that some of the original finish is gone and there's nothing that can be done to prevent rust from reforming.

(2) Stains sometimes form on the grids of waffle irons but, unless they interfere with the functioning of the iron, it's better to leave them alone. Burned butter can be removed from the grids with a stiff brush. The grids should then be re-oiled. Ordinarily, however, clean the inside by wiping lightly with a paper towel or soft cloth. The outside can be cleaned with a damp cloth. If tiny brown spots appear on the outside (caused by particles of fat deposited by escaping steam), remove them with a small amount of fine scouring powder and a soft damp cloth.

(3) Certain foods and water containing alkaline leave a dark film on the surface of aluminum. This film can often be removed by boiling a cream of tartar solution (2 teaspoons cream of tartar to 1 quart of water) in the utensil for a few minutes. Steel wool, or steel wool pads impregnated with special soap, may also be used to remove film. Strong soaps, alkalis, or alkaline scouring powder should not be used on aluminum, as they darken and discolor it.

Could you give me directions for making a table with Chippendale legs over into a coffee table. There is a brace near the bottom of the legs. The top of the table is scratched and disfigured. Will you tell me how to refinish it?

Attractive coffee tables can often be made by shortening the legs of ordinary tables. If yours is a style that would look well with short legs, saw the legs to the desired length, removing the brace.

Before refinishing the table, remove the old finish with varnish removing compound and sandpaper. Apply the compound to soften the varnish and scrape it off with a putty knife. Steel wool will probably have to be used on curved surfaces, carved areas, and small projections. Repeat the applications of varnish remover until the table is cleared of the old finish. Then wash the wood with turpentine, wiping it off with a piece of cloth.

Next, sand the wood with a piece of sandpaper wrapped around a wooden block. Always work with the grain of the wood, whether scraping or sanding. If the wood has an open grain, a filler should be applied. (Open-grained woods include oak, walnut and mahogany.) These fillers usually come in paste form, and must be used according to manufacturer's directions. If the wood is close-grained—maple, gum, pine, poplar, fir, or cedar, for instance—no filler is necessary.

One of several finishes may next be applied to the wood. Shellac makes an excellent finish if applied in the following manner: Cover the table with a thin coat of fine grade white shellac. Let it dry thoroughly, then sand lightly with the grain. Wipe clean with a dry lintless rag, then apply a coat of 4 parts white shellac and 1 part alcohol. Let this dry well, then sand again lightly. Polish with either wax or furniture polish.

Personal Cleanliness Is a Necessary Virtue

IT COSTS nothing in dollars and cents to be fastidious—yet what other virtue pays off more surely?

A musical voice is a golden gift—a lovely smile is heaven-sent—a neat pair of ankles is a real endowment, but if you are not blessed with any of these you'll still be admired if you're well-groomed. "It's the little things that count" is a hackneyed phrase, but no truer words were ever spoken when applied to proper grooming.

A portrait of a lovely lady contains certain fundamental ingredients, and these are all prefaced by the word "clean." A clear complexion with make-up skillfully applied, a nice posture, spick and span garments, a trim figure, neat ankles and tidy heels, well-cared-for hands, shining hair. Ask the man in your life if these are not the qualities he admires most. He's sure to agree that care of one's person is a vital virtue.

Let's start with the coiffure. Clean, shining hair is an absolute requisite, and if it is healthy hair it will be lovely, regardless of color, length or style. It must have strength, sheen, elasticity, be neither too oily nor too dry, and without dandruff.

This latter unlovely condition may affect the health of your scalp. Certainly it ruins the looks of your hair and brands you as slovenly.

There are many shampoos on the market that remove dandruff. Choose your favorite and use it often.

The common variety of dandruff is really the flaking off of dead scalp tissue. There is a direct relationship between the activity of the oil glands of the skin and dandruff. That is why you seldom see it in children. But it appears during adolescence, when the skin becomes more oily. Diet and general health measures probably have an effect on the character of the secretion, but it is certain that regular cleansing of the scalp will help control the amount of oil.

PORTRAIT of a Lovely Lady—starts at the top with clean, shining hair, completely free of embarrassing dandruff. Fastidious women will take extra precautions to keep their scalp and hair gleaming during the humid summer months. Choose your favorite shampoo and use it often Three Women Broadcasters Are Letting You In on U. N.

By Judith Klein

Lake Success.—In the press-radio-information catacombs of the United Nations an American, a Paraguayan and a Chinese woman are on the job six days a week keeping millions throughout the world informed by short wave on the daily doings at Lake Success.

The three—Mrs. Josephine S. Hennings, Mrs. Maria Luisa de Burt and Mrs. Siang-mei Chang—have been part of the United Nations world radio staff since October, 1946. Each has had experience in radio work and each is enthusiastic about her present assignment.

Mrs. Hennings, born in St. Louis, has been doing radio, newspaper and public relations work since 1933. At Lake Success her two most recent assignments have been helping the Philippine delegation prepare their Fourth of July Independence Day program and preparing the United Nations Charter Day program which was broadcast in 21 languages to 54 countries. Previously she wrote and broadcast news of the General Assembly meetings and conducted a series of interviews with prominent persons in the arts, science and business worlds.

Has Varied Chores

One of the first women news commentators, over KMOX, St. Louis, Mrs. Hennings finds herself working as liaison and information officer as well as script writer, broadcaster and producer.

She is also responsible for the recorded transcripts of all U. N. proceedings, parts of which are later translated and dubbed into various programs.

Mrs. de Burt and Mrs. Chang are responsible for their own programs and handle them with experienced efficiency. Mrs. de Burt, a native of Paraguay, had done newscasting for the Office of Inter-American Affairs from 1942 to 1945 in both Spanish and the Paraguayan native dialect of Guarani. She then came to this country as a Spanish broadcaster for the Office of Intercultural Information of the Department of State, and joined the U. N. short-wave staff last October.

Covering all of Latin and South America, Mrs. de Burt has four separate programs. On Tuesdays and Thursdays she gives a 15-minute description of "How the U. N. Operates," discussing and describing the machinery involved in U. N. procedure.

Mrs. de Burt, a widow who has two sons in college here and one being graduated from preparatory school, has established her personal United Nations by sharing a summer home in Port Washington with Mrs. Chang and her two children, a boy who is entering Princeton University and a daughter who has a graduate fellowship at the Julliard School.

Hearing Held In Secret for 2 Policemen

Frederick, Md., July 30 (Spl.).—Many residents here are voicing criticism of the five-man police board for excluding public and press from its initial hearing into charges of dereliction of duty brought against Police Chief Frederick M. Straley and Lieut. Reno M. Six.

Resentment has also been rising among members of the police department, awaiting their turns to testify. Many regard it as unfair to embroil them in "differences among other members of the department" and fear their futures will be jeopardized.

The Commission adjourned early today after six of 47 witnesses subpenaed had testified for 4½ hours.

Month's Delay Possible

Board Chairman William M. Storm said the hearing might not be resumed for a month.

Star witness in the "star chamber" session was Sergt. Daniel Swomley who brought the charges. He specifically charged Straley with frequent threatening of officers with changes of duty; refusal to act on complaints against Six and others for absence without leave; unexplained distribution of police force monies as Christmas gifts, and ordering dismissal of charges against an individual by another officer.

Six is charged with threatening to bring charges against the sergenat for an arrest Swomley made; cursing officers; failing to be on duty and urging the chief to distribute police monies as Christmas gifts.

The money was the proceeds from vending machines set up at the police station.

Court is Cleared

read, the courtroom was cleared of all witnesses and newspapermen, at request of defense attorneys.

Chairman Storm stated the testimony would be withheld pending submission of evidence andd recommendations of the commission to city officials.

The commission is not authorized to pass judgment, he said, and serves only to make recommendations to the mayor and board of aldermen.

Md. Reports Good Weather For Harvests

Baltimore, July 30 (AP).—The weather bureau reported today that temperatures early last week averaged six degrees below normal and before they climbed back up to the mid-summer registers on Saturday light frost had been recorded in Garrett County "frost pockets."

In its summary covering the seven days ended Monday, the bureau said conditions generally were excellent for harvesting of crops and haying. A few local areas said they needed more moisture, but generally it was ample for crops.

The weekly crop summary by areas:

Garrett, Allegany and Washington Counties—Early corn made good growth and generally is in tassel. Wheat harvest somewhat delayed by wet weather and some sprouting in the shock, but no extensive damage. Some oat fields a total loss from lodging. A fair to good pea crop. Sweet corn growing well. Good crop of snap beans. Tomatoes sizing nicely, blight still localized. Potatoes deteriorating because of earlier wet weather. Early apples, pears and peaches being picked. Blackberries coming in. Pastures very good. Hay quality deteriorated because dampness delayed harvesting. Japanese beetles damaged vetetation in Washington County.

Counties west of Chesapeake Bay—Harvesting of small grains practically completed. Yields fair to good. Corn good to excellent and made very good growth during week. Mostly in tassel, with ears forming in southern counties. Sweet corn and tomatoes being harvested in southern counties, maturing in north. Tomato blight damage localized and light. Potato yields very good. Truck crops and gardens good to very good. Plums, early peaches and apples being picked. Tobacco improved by recent rains and some plants in bloom. Crops in fair condition. Pastures very good to excellent, except poor to fair in Calvert and Howard Counties. Japanese beetles are causing considerable damage in some areas.

Eastern Shore—Wheat threshing nearly over with good yields. Truck crops good to very good, soil moisture short in some localities. Sweet corn and tomatoes going to canneries. Damage from late tomato blight is so far light but increasing. Early apples and peaches making fair yields. Pasture and hay crops very good to excellent. Japanese beetles have caused damage to vegetation.

1000 RCA Workers Vote Today on Union

Pulaski, Va., July 30 (AP).—Approximately 1000 production workers at the RCA-Victor plant here are eligible to participate in an NLRB-conducted election scheduled tomorrow to determine which, if either, of two unions will represent them as sole bargaining agent.

Office Buildings Burst Seams As West Virginia Town Sinks

Welch, W. Va., July 30 (AP).—This coal town of 6000-odd was at a loss today to explain exactly or find a remedy for a sub-surface slippage which has a large part of the downtown area sinking.

Torn sidewalks, ruptured building and buckled pavements showed the effects of the slow earth movement which has quickened in recent months.

Mayor L. E. Rogers guessed an underground stream might be to blame. He has told the city council that by listening at a wall at the rear of the Pochontas Theater, one can hear running water.

Another theory was that, in years past, coal had been mined beneath this southern West Virginia coal center, weakening the city's foundations; hut there were no charts to back up this suggestion.

Officials, pondering the fate of their city, were considering what steps should be taken. There was no indication whether geologists would be called in to study the mystery.

Nine downtown buildings have been reft by wide cracks.

The brick postoffice has burst its seams with a fissure at the rear, running the height of the building.

The McDowell County National Bank has fought balky doors which, an official said, have to be re-aligned every few weeks.

The Ellwood Hotel, the Appalachian Electric Power Co. and tracks of the Norfolk and Western Railway have also felt the effects of the sub-soil movement.

One sidewalk has pulled away from a building, leaving a wide gap. A brick pavement has sunk several inches.

Residents said their homes have been settling for years, but the sinking has grown worse recently.

Maryland Says Navy Mines Slaughter Pope's Creek Fish

Annapolis, Md., July 30 (AP).—The Tidewater Fisheries Department today asked the Navy to cease mine or depth charge explosions in Pope's Creek, a Potomac River tributary, which have caused wholesale destruction of fish.

The action was taken by Executive Secretary David H. Wallace after a report was filed by Chemist Guy E. Lerner of the Water Pollution Control Commission.

Lerner said he saw five explosions occur yesterday afternoon at Pope's Creek as he stood by with Capt. Chester Cullison and Guy Johnson of the Fisheries Department in the State boat Pocomoke.

As the three watched, Lerner said they saw a small power barge tow five objects, appearing to be mines or depth charges, into a channel from Quonset barge No. 2 and set them off, causing many fish fatalities."

"Dead and dying fish covered the waters in all directions," he said, adding that "apparently a school of perch was crossing the area at the time.

The dead fish included shad and hardheads.

Lerner said George W. Robertson of Pope's Creek, Md., reported explosions on Monday killed many fish, and that he had gathered up 300 pounds, mostly hardheads.

Wilmer Pounds of Dahlgreen, Va., who operates a trap net, said Tuesday he had seen five tons of dead and dying fish, including hardheads, trout and perch, near a Navy barge after he had heard explosions.

State law prohibits setting off dynamite or other explosive charges in Maryland waters.

$476,777 Due Va. for Schools

Richmond, Va., July 30 (AP).—The State Department of Education said today that Virginia will receive $476,777.71 for vocational education out of an appropriation of $17,750,000 to the different States as provided in the George-Barden Act signed by President Truman on July 8.

From the total $476,777.71 made for the 1947-48 fiscal year, Dowell J. Howard, Assistant Superintendent of Public Instruction, said $203,101.96 would be for agricultural education; $32,683.72 for distributive education; $154,399.25 for home economics instruction, and $86,592.78 for trades and industry education.

The bill provides that the payments to the States are to be made in equal semiannual allotments in July and January.

Howard pointed out that while the George-Barden Act contains a matching provision for State and Federal funds, Virginia already has been more than meeting this and no additional outlays will be required to receive the Federal money which amounts to an increase of $132,088.91 over the previous fiscal year.

He said the department also had been notified that Virginia will receive approximately $1,250,000 from the $65,000,000 Federal school lunch appropriation for the 1947-48 fiscal year.

Hartley to Probe Charges Against Newspaper Guild

By The Associated Press

Chairman Hartley (R., N. J.) said yesterday the House Labor Committee will look into complaints that the CIO-American Newspaper Guild in Philadelphia is trying to keep members from resigning.

Hartley told reporters one gildsman who said he spoke for others has written him that the guild is not only forbidding resignations but also threatens suit for back dues. The chairman said an investigator will make a preliminary check. If warranted, he said, the committee will make an investigation.

In Philadelphia, Irving Fagen, Administrative officer of the Philadelphia-Camden Guild, issued this statement:

"The guild denies that any guild members are being sued or had ever been sued for back dues. The general membership of the hPiladelphia-Camden local voted at its July meeting to reject resignations of several members on the ground they are still employed in the newspaper industry and should be billed for their dues. Those attempting to resign have been employes of the Philadelphia Record or the Camden Courier-Post."

Canada, Greece Sign Pact

Ottawa, Ontario, July 30 (U.P.)—A most-favored nations commercial agreement has been negotiated between Canada and Greece, the Department of External Affairs announced today.

Mrs. Bailey Heads Virginia Home Clubs

Blacksburg, Va., July 30 (AP).—Mrs. N. C. Bailey of Orange was elected president of the Virginia Federation of Home Demonstration Clubs at a business session of the group today in connection with the fourteenth Institute of Rural Affairs

Mrs. Bailey succeeds Mrs. E. Floyd Yates of Powhatan.

Mrs. C M Ware of Lee Hall was elected vice president. Reelected to office were Mrs. A. B. Slagle, Clarksville, secretary, and Mrs. C. H. White, Forrest, treasurer.

Four new district chairmen elected to two-year terms were Mrs. I. H. Sims, Franklin, District 4; Mrs. Roy Robertson, Woolwine, District 2; Mrs. J. V. Howell, New Glasgow, District 8, and Mrs. W. W. Bercaw, Palmyra, District 6.

Resolutions recommending that a rural health educator be added to the Agricultural Extension Service staff here were adopted by two groups meeting at the institute.

The Rural Committee of the Virginia Counties on Health and Medical Care, headed by Dr. P. D. Sanders, editor of the Southern Planter, recommended today that the extension service and the State Health Department jointly employ a rural health educator.

The Home Demonstration Club Federation's executive board recommended that the extension service give consideration to addition of several specialists including one in rural health.

The program today for the 625 institute delegates was conducted by agronomy, animal husbandry, wildlife and fruit growing specialists of the Experiment Station and extension service staff.

Thermometer Slated to Hit Record Today

The hottest weather of the year—wih temperatures reaching about 95 or 96—will hit Washington today.

Washington wilted yesterday under a scorching sun which boiled the mercury to 93 degrees at 4:06 p. m. Today the heat will seem even more intense because of higher humidity.

A break in the heat wave will come tomorrow, according to the Weather Bureau, when temperatures will go no higher than the middle or upper 80s.

Because of the hot weather yesterday, several thousand District Building workers were permitted to go home early. Commissioner John Russell Young called from his summer home at Mayo, Md., and ordered all department heads in the District Building to release at 3 p. m. all employes who could be spared.

So far as could be learned, no Federal Government workers were released early.

Yesterday's 93 peak mercury mark tied the previous high for the season set June 11. The figure was four degrees short of tying the all-time record temperature for the date set in 1913 and equaled in 1931. Yesterday's low was 70—at 6:06 a. m.

Italy Imposes Confiscatory Tax On Possessions

Rome, July 30.—Italy instituted tonight a tax on wealth which will confiscate more than half the possessions of the richest Italians.

Ignoring income, the law assesses a 4-per-cent tax on every piece of household furniture, dwelling, factory, farm and piece of currency and jewelry of individuals. More important, the law includes a progressive tax on all holding of $6000 or more. Starting with 3 per cent this tax mounts to 61 per cent on private possessions of more than three million dollars. Tomaso Ferrara of the Italian finance department, estimated tonight that over the next fours years more than one billion dollars will be realized.

[The United Press reported that Victor Emmanuel Orlando charged in the National Assembly that the government asked ratification of the peace treaty "through the cupidity of servitude." Orlando said the treaty was a humiliating, stupid document that "makes Italy the battlefield of a future war, if there is one."]

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Ancient Gag Causes "Lightning" To Strike Twice

James A. Hoyt takes me to task for falling for an old gag—the one about the old man who contended he was important because his government pension check was worthless until he endorsed it.

Jim says a similar joke provided a big laugh in the play "Lightning," which opened in New York on August 26, 1918.

Unfortunately I couldn't attend that opening, because I was busy playing marbles with the other boys that day. But I'm certainly willing to subscribe to the thought expressed in the final sentence of Jim's letter:

"Dig up something new next time—if there is any new joke, which I doubt."

POETRY DEPT.

Our Boston version of "Hail, Hail, The Gang's All Here" has resulted in varied response from poetically inclined District Liners.

Nobody has suggested that it was one of the gags in "Lightning," but several readers say that the verses are old stuff and have been sung for years.

That's undoubtedly correct, but other District Liners had never heard them, and got a kick out of them.

Joan G. Aamodt, of 4306 Woodberry st., University Park, Md., says that we might as well complete the cycle by printing the Boston version of "Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star." I suspect this one has also made the rounds, but here it is anyhow:

Scintillate, scintillate, globule vivific,
Would I could fathom thy nature specific.
Loftily poised in the ether capacious,
Greatly resembling a gem carbonaceous.
Scintillate, scintillate, globule vivific,
Would I could fathom thy nature specific.

Joan adds: "I looked up all the tough words in the dictionary, so you won't have to bother." Thanks, pal.

SEE THE POINT?

Ball point pens may write under both water and beet borscht, and perform other prodigious feats—but there's one thing they can't do, and that's write without ink.

This is most unfortunate, since it is virtually impossible to buy refills for most brands.

A few of the standard makes can be kept in working order by any good stationer. But the off-brands appear to be orphans.

Yet many of the merchants who can't supply the promised refills are still selling complete pens to new customers.

And if that isn't a sharp practice, then you can call me mistaken—not for years, not for life, not forever, but for an even longer period.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Available for adoption: One white male puppy, about four months old; three terrier-type females, two months old." (Union 3557.)

CARNIVAL DAZE

This story of a harried mother, and a daughter who wouldn't stay put while visiting the carnival, is reported by Evelyn Mudd, of 329 Longfellow st. nw.

Janie wanted to ride on the miniature railroad, so Mama went to buy her a ticket. When Mama returned, she thrust the ticket into an outstretched hand while she counted and pocketed her change.

Then Mama discovered that the ticket had been given to a perfect stranger, and that her own little girl had wandered off.

So there followed a scramble to retrieve the ticket and to locate Janie. This was finally accomplished just as the miniature train was pulling out for another trip.

Mama grabbed the little girl standing next to her and hustled her aboard. But as the train chuffed away, Mama experienced that sinking sensation again.

The little girl on the train was another perfect stranger, and Janie had reappeared to tug at Mama's skirt and ask:

"Can I ride on the train now, Mama—can I?"

Grin and Bear It

"It's the first time I've understood anything about foreign affairs—They say there's an acute shortage of American dollars!"

Leonard Lyons

Orson Pulls Tortoise on the Hare

Hollywood.—Orson Welles was invited to a birthday party for Louis B. Mayer, a party at which most of the guests were to entertain. Magician Welles took his pet rabbit with him, placed it inside the trick pocket in his dinner jacket and went to the party. There were so many entertainers that by midnight Welles' name still was 'way down the list of those to be called on. At 5 a. m. the party ended without Welles having had a chance to do his turn. "This is worse," said Welles, when he came home and took the rabbit from his pocket and sent the jacket to the cleaners, "than bringing a harp to a party and not being called on."

At Universal - International, Bill Goetz visited the set of "The Senator Was Indiscreet." Around him wandered the grips who were preparing the set for shooting. One of them told the producer, "I think you'd be safer if you'd stand a few feet away. We're putting up a new chandelier and if you stand here it might fall and kill you." . . . "Thank you," said Goetz beaming. "This proves what a fine management-labor relationship has been established here. In other studios they'd never give such a warning to a boss."

Nunnally Johnson discovered that in Yugoslavia the Steinbeck story "The Grapes of Wrath," which Johnson adapted and produced, was being exhibited under a new title. Said Johnson, "It's short and it tells the story."

Walter Reisch, the screen writer, tells of a prewar flight he took in a British plane. Next to him sat a stateless European, a victim of Hitler, traveling on a passport which merely had his name, photo and identification number. The plane steward announced that Sir Samuel Hoare, who was aboard en route to a conference, was sick and needed emergency medical treatment. The plane was over Germany and the Nazis had wirelessed permission for a thirty-minute stopoff at Weisbaden. The traveler protested that if he were found on German soil the Nazis would kill him. "No," said the steward, "we've arranged that while the plane is in Germany all passengers are to be considered British subjects" . . . "I hated to see us take off," sighed the stateless one later. "For thirty minutes I had a British passport."

Mrs. Ethel G. Hopkins, ex-wife of the late Harry Hopkins, lives on the West Coast near her sons, David and Robert Hopkins, and her grandchildren. A few days ago Mrs. Hopkins closed her house and went off to school. She enrolled at Scripps College at Claremont, Calif., studying art. Like the rest of the students there, she lives in a dorm, and at regular intervals her sons and grandchildren go up to Claremont to visit student-Grandma Hopkins at her school.

Dagmar Godowsky is spending a vacation in Reno. "I love it here in Reno," she told her Nevada friends. "I'm getting married soon so I have a real legitimate reason for coming back."

The King brothers, the independent film producers who have been making quick successful pictures, have a unique approach in their dealings with the writers and directors they hire. They signed Richard Sale and his wife-collaborator, Mary Anita Loos, and warned them, "Remember that we and we alone run this studio. Nobody else. So we have the say and around here our word goes." Then they added: "But don't let us get away with that because, after all, you're the creators."

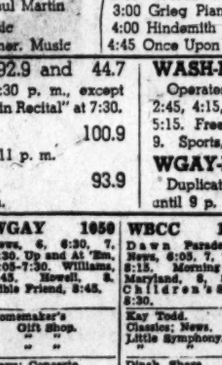
Completely new booklet of "PORTRAITS" now available!



Are you a reader of James J. Metcalfe's popular poems, one of which appears daily in THE WASHINGTON POST? A second collection of "PORTRAITS" is now available in booklet form. There's no repetition from the first booklet. In this edition back pages are so arranged that you can add your own favorite verses. A brief biography of author Metcalfe is included, too.

You can get a copy by sending 25c (coin) to The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C., or by stopping at the lobby counter in The Washington Post Building, 1337 E Street N.W.

Portraits

By James J. Metcalfe

This day is done

This day is over now and I . . . Am grateful for the rest . . And yet I wonder if I have . . . Contributed my best . . . I wonder if I said hello . . . To everyone I met . . . Or if I caused the least concern . . . Or feeling of regret . . . Perhaps I did not do as well . . . As I was taught to do . . . Or maybe I began a job . . . And did not see it through . . . At any rate the day is done . . . And what is past is gone . . . And all the future now depends . . . Upon another dawn . . . I should not dream of years gone by . . . Or what occurred today . . . But I should plan the time ahead . . . To live a better way.

EXQUISITE CABIN CRAFT NEEDLE TUFTED SPREADS

Discontinued Pattern 7.95

Cabin Craft's the Tiffany of needle-tufted spreads. Ordinarily you have to pay fancy prices for them. Why not now? Only because the manufacturer's discontinuing the "Valentine" pattern . . . gave us all he had on hand at a fraction of their value. It's an authentic copy of the quaint Colonial design your Early American ancestors lovingly worked by hand. Interlocked heart pattern set off by Candlewicking . . . and Ripple-tuft border. All done in smart two-tone effect. Noon blue, Morning yellow, Rose pink, Dew green. Extra large . . . single size approximately 72x108 . . . double size approximately 90x108 inches.

Now . . . Luxuriously Fringed
HOBNAIL* SPREADS
In Bon-Bon Pastels as well as frost-white

Twin and Double Sizes 5.99

Imagine . . . only 5.99! And this spread's studded with 8,944 butter-ball plump hobnails. It's dripping with lavish 5-inch fringe . . . hand-knotted to prevent matting and tangling. No wonder we say it's a shining prize in our Half-Yearly. Get it in cool frost white with matching fringe. Get it in delicately tinted tearose, rosedust, blue, nile green or maize with antique white fringe. And don't forget . . . get an extra one in the double size to snip in half . . . use as draperies. They're puff-soft spreads. Resist mussing. Grow fluffier with tubbing. Need no ironing. And look smart the year 'round.
